POLICE BAFFLED BY GIRL SINGER'S DEATH

CHRISTINA GRANT, IMPORTANT WITNESS IN ROOF MURDER MYSTERY.

STORIES TOLD BY POISON VICTIM'S FIANCE AND HER MOTHER DEEPEN MYSTERY

SLAYER OF LUCCI IN NET TO-DAY

Police Expect to Arrest Man Guilty of Battery Street Murder.

SAID TO BE JEALOUS RIVAL

Pursuing the theory of murder committed in a jealous rage, the police expect to have before night the alleged murderer of Pampalone Lucci in their hands. All things indicate that Lucci was slain on the roof of No. 42 Battery street by a man who resented his attentions to pretty Mariana Dixie, and was therefore jealous. Certain letters which have come to the police tend to confirm this theory.

There are many letters now in the hands of the police. To one of these Lieutenant Rosario, who is aiding Captain Thuren in the search for the slayer, attaches a great deal of importance. It is in Italian. The writer signs his name and is a man of standing in the North End colony. This letter points strongly to a suspect, who is also mentioned in other letters. There is another man named by citizens who have been detailed for several hours at the Hanover Street Station.

Cling to Jealousy Theory.

Miss Mariana Dixie, to whom the victim of the roof tragedy paid attention, insists that she had no jealous admirer. The police, however, believe that jealousy is the most probable motive for the crime and are still working along this line. It is said that they have received information which points to a romance and certain characteristic of secrecy is blinding the trail.

Vitti would not have been arrested had he not answered the description of the murderer as he was seen fleeing from the scene of his crime by Edwardo and Tomaso de la Rocco.

One witness who may be of value in establishing the identity of any person who is arrested is pretty Carolina Grant, who lives in the fourth floor back, Nos. 42-50 Battery street, where the murder occurred. Miss Grant saw the supposed murderer as he ran away and thinks she might be able to identify him. Her description of him is now in the hands of the detectives.

Witnesses on Hand.

The two de la Rocco brothers and Mariana Dixie, the girl over whom it is believed the murderer and his victim fought, with her brother Crocco and little Peter Anesa are several other witnesses who were brought to the station by the police and were there in readiness to make their identification when the prisoner was brought in.

He was put through the third degree without result, and then he was confronted with the witnesses.

They said he was of the same size as the man they saw fleeing from the roof. Eight pairs of eyes positively identified him as the man, and said they had never seen him before.

Finally Captain Dugan decided to release Vitti, and gave him a bill in his hand. "You may take my car fare with," led him to the door. Vitalo expressing his thanks and with a smile of relief on his face, the Italian walked out a free man again, and was quickly surrounded by his friends, several of whom rode in with him when the officers were taking their prisoner to the station.

Now that Vitti is released the mystery is as great a riddle as before. The motive of robbery has been eliminated, and if Mariana Dixie's denial be believed she was not the cause of a sweetheart's quarrel. However, there are many friends of the murdered man who are ready to the last to believe that the man with whom he was in love and say Lucci boasted of the girl's favors only a few days ago.

Captain Dugan said to-day: "My opinion is that the murder was the result of a sudden quarrel. Perhaps Lucci lived in a house and was passing by the scene of the crime and remembered a cool roof where he once lived and went up there to escape the heat. Then some inmate of the house may have noticed him, thought he was some thief or robber and grappled with him. Italians are noted for their hot tempers, and it is easy to imagine angry words and then the fatal fight."

The police are now heeding all their energies toward discovering the author of the mysterious letter, for it is believed that in this person they may have some one whose knowledge may go a long way toward solving the most puzzling murder which has baffled them for many years.

Dead Girl's Fiance, Heart-Broken at Her Tragic End, Tells of Last Meeting and Letter She Wrote Him of Mysterious Visit to Boston----Former Associates in Woonsocket Store Mourn at Bier of Comrade To-day---Inquest May Shed Light on Puzzling Case.

Mystery surrounding the death of beautiful Florence Mailloux, the nineteen-year-old Woonsocket girl, who suddenly left her home to die in Mrs. Cummings's private hospital at No. 19 Orange street, Chelsea, deepens after the statement of her mother, who has been found and interviewed to-day. Her death was due to poison, believed by the police to have been taken or administered for a criminal purpose.

No person has been found who saw Miss Mailloux from the time she left her home until she appeared the next day at the office of Dr. Horace S. Everett, No. 526 Tremont street, and applied for treatment.

Mother Gives No Light.

Mrs. Victoria Mailloux, the girl's mother, separated from her husband, declares that she did not see her daughter. Mrs. Mailloux is living at the Shoreham, Shirley street, Winthrop Beach. She does not know who could have given her daughter poison, she declares.

Edward Brodeur of Worcester, fiance of the dead girl, says that the last time he saw her was on July 4. He does not know who gave the girl poison, he says.

"I have no idea to whom my daughter could have gone," said Louis Mailloux. He seeks the one who may have given his daughter poison.

Girl Dead From Poison

Captain Dugan of police headquarters is working on the medical examiner's finding that the girl died from poison administered for a criminal purpose.

"It is evident that a drug was administered with criminal intent and purpose," said Captain Dugan to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

"Was it intent or was the crime actually committed?" he was asked.

"That I do not know, but it is practically the same thing so far as the law is concerned."

"Was it self-administered?"

"That is the purpose of the inquest to determine.

"At the inquest it may be possible to determine whether the Chelsea or Boston courts have jurisdiction. When criminal proceedings are instituted, if there are any, it will be up to the police to ask for a warrant from the court having jurisdiction in the place where the inquest reveals the affair took place."

Arrangements are being made to-day by Captain Dyer of Police Headquarters with Judge Bosson of the Chelsea court for an inquest to be held at the earliest moment at which witnesses can be called.

Father Demands Justice.

While the father urges the police to bring to justice the person or persons responsible for his daughter's death, his wife is in a state of collapse at Winthrop.

"Why didn't she come to me if she were in trouble," she cried when the news was told her.

Mrs. Mailloux says that she knew from the letters she received from her daughter that she was in some sort of trouble, but she never could fathom what it was. She first heard of her daughter's death from a friend," who telephoned the news as she read it in one of the daily papers.

"I last saw my daughter just before Christmas," said Mrs. Mailloux to-day. "I wrote her a week ago last Sunday, and that was probably the letter she received on the day she left Woonsocket.

"She never came to me. Only a few days before she left home she wrote me, saying that she was not well, but I had no idea that it was anything serious.

"I knew of her engagement to Mr. Brodeur and approved of it. She never told me of having any friends here in Boston. There is one I can think of who in any way would seek to injure my daughter?"

MOTHER NOT AT FUNERAL.

Mrs. Mailloux did not attend the funeral of her daughter, which was held to-day from the home of her uncle, Henry Mailloux, No. 95 Park avenue, Woonsocket. Dr. Thurber, with whose family she is living in Winthrop, refused to permit it.

Edward Brodeur, the dead girl's affianced, was one of the mourners and appeared broken hearted.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Mr. Brodeur said:—

"I was engaged to Miss Mailloux, but there was no date set for the wedding. I frequently called here to see her and the last time was July 4. A little over a week ago I received a letter from her in which she said that she was going to Boston. I gathered from the way she said it that she intended to be gone only for a day. She told me not to write as she would write me when she returned.

"Not receiving a letter I wrote to her week ago last Wednesday, but received no reply, but thought nothing more of it because I believed she would write me when she returned. My letter is here in Woonsocket, for I sent it to this address.

"I immediately after the funeral Mr. Brodeur returned to his home in Worcester.

The funeral services were held at the Church of the Most Precious Blood and were attended by all the employes of the Harris & Mowry department store where she was employed as a buyer.

TO PROBE MYSTERY.

All the evidence in the case of the girl's death has been turned over to Captain Dugan by Assistant District Attorney Buckrose, who has issued instructions that the case be followed to the end. It is believed that the summoning of a number of witnesses to the inquest will reveal some things which the police have been unable to learn up to the present time.

It is said in Woonsocket that Florence was in the habit of receiving letters from her mother and that one is supposed to

JURY NOW TO SETTLE FATE OF SCOLLANS

Judge Bond Charges Them and Defends the System of Trial.

The Scollans jury is now deliberating on the fate of the former Boston contractor who is accused of stealing from the city and on trial upon the charge of being concerner in the bribing of a juryman, but before the twelve men who are to decide whether the defendant is innocent or guilty retired from the courtroom Judge Bond took occasion to indorse the jury system, an institution criticised of late by some of the ablest lawyers and jurists in the country.

The close of the trial of Thomas J. Scollans was made sensational by the attack made by Attorney Dewing, the prisoner's counsel, upon Mrs. Lillian Dundee of Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly a clerk for the accused, but now a State witness. The attorney dramatically pointed a finger of scorn at the pretty woman and called her an ingrate.

In his charge to the jury, which retired at 10:40 o'clock, Judge Bond said:

"This case is important to the community. Sometimes there is complaint because of the verdict of a jury, but when you get honest, intelligent men we have no better tribunal. What we want is an honest verdict, and if you act as upright, honest, faithful men you will be of value to the community, but if you act in any other way it is a menace to the community.

Judge Bond's remarks about jurymen made a deep impression upon auditors, as Scollans is accused of being accessory to the bribing of a juror when he was on trial for another offence.

Passed Awful Ordeal.

The broker prisoner passed through an awful ordeal when he was compelled to undergo a rigid and searching cross-examination on the witness stand by Assistant District-Attorney Chase, who did not spare him in the least, although his lawyers declared he came out victorious in the sharp passage-at-arms with the astute attorney. Scollans displayed remarkable composure, smiling at times, weighing carefully his answers and showing every outward appearance of his confidence in withstanding the attack of the prosecution.

More trying, perhaps, to him was when he was compelled to see his faithful and devoted wife, her face showing the intense mental and physical strain she had been undergoing, walk to the witness stand and testify how he had remained at home for three days after the case had been taken from the jury because of the bribing of Juror Milliken.

Mrs. Scollans is a medium-sized, well-formed woman of the brunette type, with a sweet yet careworn expression. Her testimony was very short and the gallant

HOLD FIANCEE AS CARLTON'S ACCOMPLICE

Mrs. Eleanor Vandeventer Arrested in Connection With Blackmail Charge.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—With the arrest today of Mrs. Eleanor Vandeventer, charged with complicity in attempted blackmail with Frederick C. Carlton, the police say they are now certain of securing convictions against Carlton for five distinct crimes. These do not include charges in connection with the mysterious deaths of two of his six or more wives, nor do they include a charge of burying "dummy" bodies and recovering from insurance companies.

Altogether the police regard Carlton as one of the most astounding criminals ever in their hands. Mrs. Vandeventer is accused of being his accomplice. She is charged to have posed for certain photographs by means of which Carlton attempted to blackmail certain women of Brooklyn, the police declare. His plan was to photograph their faces on the body of another figure.

Five Charges Against Him.

Mrs. Vandeventer's arrest is considered a highly important move by the police toward the discovery of the full operations of Carlton. If she will talk at all, and it is believed she will through jealousy, as she is in love with Carlton, her story will probably be an amazing one in throwing the searchlight on this mass of many aliases. Carlton was arraigned to-day and held under bond.

"We are sure," said Police Inspector Cross, "of sending Carlton to prison for a long term. The five charges which we are positive of fastening upon him are these:

"First—Drugging and robbing Dr. Chas. A. Goldsmith of Stamford, Ct., on whose accusation he has been indicted in New York for larceny in the first degree.

"Second—Robbing H. J. Schaub in a similar manner. This is the charge on which he was arraigned to-day.

"Third—Conspiracy.

"Fourth—Attempt to blackmail.

"Fifth—Violating section 317 of the code in that he uttered, published and caused to be sold improper pictures."

Woman Posed for Him.

The blackmail and conspiracy charges gave the police occasion to arrest Mrs. Vandeventer, a young woman lately known as "Mrs. Carlton," who has said, since his arrest, that she was in nearly him. The police believe she can tell much about Carlton's system of trick photography and they seem to be able to give valuable evidence in regard to the most serious suspicion against the man—that of murder.

Regarding the latest charge against Carlton, Inspector Cross said:

"We have two witnesses to whom Carlton showed unlawful pictures for which Mrs. Vandeventer posed. They are of Schaub and his landlady in Sands street, Mrs. Schultze. We have also information that he photographed Mrs. Vandeventer's child for a similar picture."

$685,000 LOAN TO HEADS OF EQUITABLE PAID BACK

MYSTERIOUS PAYMENT MADE A WEEK AGO, IT IS SAID, TO SAVE FURTHER SCANDAL.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—That mysterious loan of $685,000, made by the Mercantile Trust Company to James W. Alexander and Thomas D. Jordan as trustee of the Equitable Life, was mysteriously repaid last Friday by orders of State Superintendent of Banking Kilburn. It was wholly unsecured, save by a note. Now it has been cleared away on the brink of the State investigation of the Equitable and other insurance companies doing business in the State.

This investigation will begin at once. It will be in the hands of a joint legislative committee, headed by Senator Armstrong, and $50,000 has been appropriated for the use of the committee. Before this committee will appear all those directors of the Equitable who held office at the time the storm in this society began to brew. The list of names includes more important men than any investigation in the history of the State has ever seen together as probable witnesses. T. Jefferson Coolidge of Boston is one of them.

May Clear Loan Mystery.

The circumstances surrounding the paying of the loan of $685,000 may be cleared up by this investigation. State Superintendent of Banks Kilburn is quoted as saying:

"The loan was made by the Mercantile Trust Company to Bell in his hand. "You may take my car fare with," led him to the door. Vitalo expressing his thanks and with a smile of relief on his face, the Italian walked out a free man again, and was quickly surrounded by his friends, several of whom rode in with him when the officers were taking their prisoner to the station.

Now that Vitti is released the mystery is as great a riddle as before. The motive of robbery has been eliminated, and if Mariana Dixie's denial be believed she was not the cause of a sweetheart's quarrel. However, there are many friends of the murdered man who are ready to the last to believe that the man with whom he was in love and say Lucci boasted of the girl's favors only a few days ago.

Captain Dugan said to-day: "My opinion is that the murder was the result of a sudden quarrel. Perhaps Lucci lived in a house and was passing by the scene of the crime and remembered a cool roof where he once lived and went up there to escape the heat. Then some inmate of the house may have noticed him, thought he was some thief or robber and grappled with him. Italians are noted for their hot tempers, and it is easy to imagine angry words and then the fatal fight."

The police are now heeding all their energies toward discovering the author of the mysterious letter, for it is believed that in this person they may have some one whose knowledge may go a long way toward solving the most puzzling murder which has baffled them for many years.

forty-eight hours, after which there will be a preliminary meeting of the committee for organization.

RYAN FOLLOWS OLD GAME, NAMES DUMMY DIRECTORS

NEW YORK, July 21.—Thomas F. Ryan, who controls the Equitable life since the disposition of the majority stock by James Hazen Hyde is following old lines in making up the new directorate. He has created nine new directors, dundee it is said, each to hold five shares which are transferred to them from stock formerly held by Mr. Hyde. Here are the men:

John J. Albright of Buffalo.
Joseph Bryan of Richmond, Va.
Nicholas Murray Butler of New York.
Vlad. Havrick of Albany.
E. W. Rollins of Penates, N. J.
Thomas Spratt of Gaithsburg, Md.
E. R. Thomas of New York.
C. Schaefer of Philadelphia.
Strasshaus of New York, declined.

Not Included in Ryan's Block.

The forty-five shares of stock necessary to qualify these men as directors are not included in the 502 shares purchased by Mr. Ryan from Mr. Hyde and transferred to Grover Cleveland, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien and George Westinghouse as trustees. They represent either an additional purchase or else some form of partnership agreement between Mr. Ryan and Mr. Hyde, whereby the latter loans him out for the qualifications of the new directors.

In addition to these new stockholding directors there have been further rearrangements of stock holdings, so that some of the old dummy directors can qualify. Seven fifteen of the forty-seven shares of Hyde stock that stood in the name of H. H. Winthrop have been taken away from him and transferred in blocks of five to George J. Gould, Thomas T. Eckert and Levi P. Morton.

Hyde Stock Transferred.

The five shares of Hyde stock that stood in the name of A. J. Cassatt have been transferred to Valentine P. Snyder. The five shares of Hyde stock in the name of M. E. Ingalls, which were transferred some time ago to Paul Morton, have been turned over by the latter to the trustees. A new block of five has been transferred by T. D. Jordan to Mr. Morton. The report of Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks said that Mr. Jordan owned stock in his own name. He formerly was credited with owning ten shares. Mr. Jordan was dismissed from his position as comptroller by Mr. Morton two days ago for refusing to give up information to the new management.

Paid by Others?

The restitution to the society was made in a lump sum. As neither Mr. Alexander, who is now reported very ill at his Long Island home, nor Mr. Jordan, who was summarily dismissed from the society for his refusal to explain certain money transactions, is wealthy the payment of this great sum is believed to have been made by persons who have vital interests at stake.

Both Paul Morton, the executive head of the Equitable, and Thomas F. Ryan, controller of the majority stock of the society, have themselves expressed at the expected investigation which is to begin soon. The Speaker of the House has yet to name five members of the joint committee. He will probably do so within

HUSBAND AND WIFE IN DUEL OF WORDS

Mrs. Mailloux Says Her Husband Is Living With Another Woman.

Mrs. Victoria Mailloux, the mother of the girl who died from poison administered for a criminal purpose, is living at the Shoreham, Shirley street, Winthrop Beach. She does not know who could have given her daughter poison, she declares.

Mrs. Mailloux is living apart from her husband, who is living with another woman, she says. Mrs. Mailloux declares that her husband is not to blame for the death of their daughter.

"I have no idea to whom my daughter could have gone," said Louis Mailloux. He seeks the one who may have given his daughter poison.

Mrs. Mailloux says that she knew from the letters she received from her daughter that she was in some sort of trouble, but she never could fathom what it was. She first heard of her daughter's death from a friend," who telephoned the news as she read it in one of the daily papers.

"I last saw my daughter just before Christmas," said Mrs. Mailloux to-day. "I wrote her a week ago last Sunday, and that was probably the letter she received on the day she left Woonsocket.

"She never came to me. Only a few days before she left home she wrote me, saying that she was not well, but I had no idea that it was anything serious.

"I knew of her engagement to Mr. Brodeur and approved of it. She never told me of having any friends here in Boston. There is one I can think of who in any way would seek to injure my daughter?"

MOTHER NOT AT FUNERAL.

Mrs. Mailloux did not attend the funeral of her daughter, which was held to-day from the home of her uncle, Henry Mailloux, No. 95 Park avenue, Woonsocket. Dr. Thurber, with whose family she is living in Winthrop, refused to permit it.

AUTOPSY ON GIRL WHO DIED IN PRIVATE HOSPITAL REVEALS TRACES OF POISON

FLORENCE MAILLOUX, VICTIM OF POISONING DRUG.

DEMAND FOR JUSTICE MADE BY HER FATHER

Police Hope to Clear Up Mystery at Inquest Held To-morrow.

have arrived on the day she left home, a week ago last Monday. That was the last seen of her in Woonsocket. Her father only knew of her whereabouts when he received the telegram from Mrs. Cummings, telling him his daughter was dead.

That a drug, self-administered or given by some person unknown, was a factor in the girl's death is admitted, and at the inquest, to which all those who have been acquainted with the girl will be subpoenaed, the authorities hope to clear up the mystery. Miss Mailloux was one of the prettiest girls in Woonsocket. While but nineteen years of age, she appeared somewhat older, and would easily have passed for twenty-four or twenty-five.

She was remarkably bright and was employed as buyer in the Harris & Mowery department store of Woonsocket. She was passionately fond of music, and she herself was an accomplished musician. She was a member of the choir of the fashionable Uxbridge Unitarian Church, and also of Uxbridge Lodge, No. 157, K. of P. Louis M. Mailloux and Mrs. Victoire Roberts Mailloux, the father lives with his brother, Henry, No. 50 Park avenue, Woonsocket, and the girl lived with an uncle, Joseph Mayer, on Cue street, Woonsocket.

WENT TO VISIT MOTHER.

Investigation at Woonsocket disclosed the fact that the girl had been in correspondence with her mother and had told friends there of her intention of visiting her mother, notwithstanding her father had strongly advised against such a course although not absolutely prohibiting it.

Captain Dugan, who is conducting the investigation of the case for the district attorney, expressed small hope of being able to clear up the mystery.

"We are waiting now," he said, "to learn the result of the analysis of the contents of the stomach, for until we learn the nature of the drug taken by or administered to Miss Mailloux, we are in the dark how to proceed. Much depends in our investigation as to whether the drug which caused the girl's death was some simple and well known drug which any one could have purchased at a drug store and which the girl might have bought herself and taken without the advice of any one, or whether it shall be shown that the drug was one that could have only been obtained by her on a doctor's prescription.

"As the case stands it is one of the most difficult kind in the world to handle, as without the evidence of the girl it will be practically impossible to prove that the drug was administered to her or was taken by her on the advice of any one."

BILLS STILL UNPAID.

When Mr. Mailloux called on Captain Dugan and told him what he knew of the case he told considerable stress upon the fact that Dr. Everett and Mrs. Cummings, who was in charge of the hospital, had told him, he said, that he owed them nothing. He told Captain Dugan that he had asked Dr. Everett how much his bill would be, and that the doctor had told him that the girl had paid him $7, and that nothing more was due, and that Mrs. Cummings had told him that she was paid for her.

This statement was contradicted by both the doctor and Mrs. Cummings. Dr. Everett said that he had told the girl's father that she had asked him on Saturday how much she owed him, and seemed anxious to settle with him. She paid him $7, but he has received nothing since.

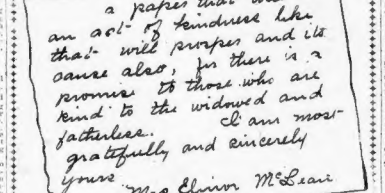
"I had not given the matter a thought," said the doctor, "but I suppose if Mr. Mailloux is responsible I shall send my bill to him."

Mrs. Cummings stated that she has at no time said that she had been paid for her care of Miss Mailloux. Because of a published statement that Mr. Mailloux had said he was told that Dr. Everett and she had been paid for their services by his daughter, the last evening mailed a bill to Mr. Mailloux at Woonsocket.

MISSING OVER A WEEK.

According to dispatches from Woonsocket, there was the best of feeling between Miss Mailloux and the father. Two weeks ago she left Harris & Mowery at closing time, as usual, without saying anything of her future intentions. She did not return for work the following Monday, and it was not until several days later that the inquiries by the firm brought the facts of her disappearance home to her relatives.

BROTHER AND SISTER ARE UNITED AFTER 10 YEARS



a paper that will do an act of kindness like that will prosper and its cause also, for there is a promise to those who are kind to the widowed and fatherless.
I am most gratefully and sincerely yours
Mrs Elinor McLean

MRS. ELINOR M'LEAN, BABY AND LETTER.

Mrs. McLean, who was reunited to her brother through an advertisement in the BOSTON AMERICAN, wrote a letter of acknowledgment, a fac-simile of which is shown underneath her own and little girl's picture.

Advertisement in Boston American Brings Happiness to Widow and Her Baby Daughter.

SEAT, through and obliging American widow of the words printed in newspapers where she once made a home. It would be willing to do the same if there was permanent. Address Box 1122, Boston American.

Through an advertisement in the BOSTON AMERICAN, Mrs. Elinor McLean has been reunited with her brother, Charles Perris of Middletown, Ct., whom she had not seen for ten years.

Mrs. McLean, a comely woman of thirty-eight, and her pretty four-year-old daughter Nellie, have been stopping for a few days with Mrs. G. R. Mabey, an old friend, at No. 3 Granville terrace, Dorchester. They came here from Hiram, Me., and in a day or two will go to Middletown to find the home among their own kin that they were so sadly in need of.

The good work wrought by the advertisement, which appeared for a week in these columns was made known by Mrs. McLean in a letter to the BOSTON AMERICAN, from which the following is an extract:

"Over a week ago I wrote you in great distress, being unable to pay for advertising, asking you if you would insert an advertisement free of charge. You most kindly consented, and ran one for more than a week. I received fourteen answers, and then ten, and then fifteen, until I finally have nearly one hundred letters written in reply to my request for employment.

"Among the second lot was one written by a man, with four children, who had lost his wife. The letter was signed 'Charles Perris.' That was the name of my only brother, from whom I had not heard for more than ten years. I answered it and yesterday received a reply which brought me great happiness, as the writer turned out to be my brother Charlie. I 'builded better than I knew' when I wrote you, and my heart is full of gratitude.

"Yes, I am glad to have an opportunity to tell you about myself and how happy the BOSTON AMERICAN has made me and my little girl," said Mrs. McLean to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter who called at the Granville terrace address. "I want it known how kind you were to me when I needed help so much and what good you are doing.

"My brother and myself have corresponded, and there is no doubt that he is my brother. He joined the 12th U. S. Infantry at Plattsburgh, N. Y., where our home was, fourteen years ago. My father was a Methodist minister, as poor as poverty, who preached on Sunday and worked hard the rest of the week in an iron foundry.

"From Plattsburgh my brother was transferred to Oswego, and he then went on to Standing Rock reservation, Sitting Bull's reservation in the West. Ten years ago I lost track of him. I did not even know that he was alive. I have since learned that he married and that he and his wife died when he came East, leaving him with four children. He did not know that I was married. I was married in the Emmanuel Church in Boston eight years ago to Mr. McLean, who was from Nova Scotia.

"My husband was an inspector in the Edison Electric Company. Four years after we were married, and seven weeks before little Nellie was born, he was shocked to death while at work in Bowdoin square. From that time life has had many trials, but I have never lost hope that the sun would again shine brightly. My little girl has been my greatest consolation and source of courage. I was so near being discouraged as I wrote you when I wrote to the BOSTON AMERICAN for help in finding a place, as the man for whom I was keeping house had decided to get another woman because I would not marry him."

CZAR SAILS TO MEET KAISER NEAR SWEDEN

ST. PETERSBURG, July 21.—The Czar leaves Peterhof today ostensibly for a tour of the coast on the Imperial yacht Polar Star.

It is known to-day, however, that his definite purpose is to meet the German Emperor in Swedish waters. It is understood that he will be absent for four days. The expected meeting is regarded here as an event of momentous importance.

The decision of the Czar to go on a yachting trip to confer with Emperor William at the time when Russia is awaiting his declaration upon the Moscow program has profoundly impressed the reform leaders.

Among them it is believed that his immediate anxiety is rather to avoid facing a constitution than to learn the nature of Japan's peace proposals. The pessimism that prevails regarding peace is based on a report that his reply to the Japanese terms, if they involve the cession of Sakhalin for the payment of an indemnity, will be that they only can be established if accompanied by a Russo-Japanese alliance.

Reports prevail in St. Petersburg that events are proceeding in Moscow to-day similar to those of January 22 (Red Sunday) in St. Petersburg.

MILLIONAIRE KILLED IN AUTO COLLISION

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 21.—M. A. Hancock, a millionaire plow manufacturer, was killed, and his wife, two sons and a daughter badly injured as the result of an automobile accident.

The family, in a large machine, was speeding about forty miles an hour when the automobile collided with a buggy and swerved into a telegraph pole. Hancock, Sr., was hurled from the car against the pavement. His skull was fractured, and he died in a few minutes. Hancock, Jr., who drove the machine, was severely bruised, but no bones were broken. J. Saul, occupant of the buggy, was seriously injured and may die.

JUDGE FINES AND LECTURES 7 AUTOISTS

WORCESTER, July 21.—The story of the speeding through the outlying districts of Worcester by members of the Gliddon automobile party on their way to Boston, before starting for the Montmorenci, was bruited in court to-day when Judge Samuel P. Utley gave seven of the surprised autoists a severe lecture and fined them $15 each.

"A few more instances of illegal speeding like this and I think legislation will restore the full sentence for the offence. I believe that the abolition of the jail sentence was unwise," declared Judge Utley.

"If it is restored, speeding will be stopped. I do not recognize any difference between those offenders and others. They are not our guests, nor guests of the Commonwealth. They come here vaunting their wealth, speeding around the country in cars. They abuse officers for enforcing the laws and accuse them of setting traps to catch offenders.

"They also oppose the automobile laws and the enforcing of them. I think, however, that every community to-day has placed some restriction on the speed of automobiles, and the law must be enforced."

The seven autoists who were fined were all in court and represented by counsel. They were: Mrs. John Newton Cuneo, Richmond Hill, L. I.; W. C. Temple, Pittsburg, Penn.; Carl H. Page, New York; Robert Lee Morrell, New York; R. E. Olds, Lansing, Mich.; Florence P. Page, Springfield; Ezra H. Fitch, Montclair, N. J.

1,000 NEW LAWYERS.

district-attorney declined to subject her to a rigid cross-examination.

Prisoner Relieved.

The prisoner heaved a sigh of relief when his wife left the stand and the court room. She did not remain to hear the, at times, dramatic plea of the prosecuting attorney, who lashed and excoriated the prisoner verbally, and demanded of the jury that they find him guilty, declaring that to release him on the charge would be a foul blot on the judicial records of the State.

The evidence being completed, Lawyer Howing began his argument.

"Scollans had been prejudged from before the time the fleeing fraud case was tried, and has been laboring under that suspicion since," he said. "Sullivan is a self-confessed perjurer, and in order to escape prison for his cowardly action was willing to tell any story; yet even Sullivan admits he never met Scollans.

"No doubt, Scollans's friends were interested in securing his freedom, and may have gone further than was right, but without the knowledge of Scollans.

"God deliver me from an ingrate, whether it be man or woman. Mrs. Donohey, after being befriended, rushes from Brooklyn, N. Y., here, without any compulsion, and from some motive unknown to us, tells a story that Scollans has publicly announced that he was going to buy a jury is an absolute falsehood, as to some men, even if he did contemplate it, would notify anyone, and Scollans is no insane."

YOUNG COUPLE SLIP AWAY AND ARE MARRIED

East Boston Girl and Somerville Man Run Away to Providence to Be Made One.

TRIED TO KEEP SECRET

The culmination of a pretty romance of a handsome East Boston girl and a well known young man of Somerville became known when dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN from Providence gave the news of the elopement of Miss Josephine Gertrude Shea, 20 years old, daughter of Mrs. John Shea of No. 95 Liverpool street, East Boston, and William Foster Wade, 20 years old, son of the late Nathaniel Wade of Somerville.

Miss Shea, who is a beautiful, dark-haired young woman, is a stenographer in the office of a Boston lawyer. She slipped away to Providence, was married and quietly returned home. Her mother knew nothing of the marriage until informed by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN. The young woman stoutly denied that she had been married, when first asked regarding the ceremony, but admitted the elopement.

Mr. Wade is engaged in business in Somerville. He and Miss Shea had known each other for about four years, and it was generally believed among their friends that they were to be married. The young lady's mother advised them to wait until Mr. Wade was of age, and that is why the pretty, young bride said to-day, an effort was made to keep the fact of the wedding a secret.

"Why, my daughter has been home every day and has said nothing to me about being married," said Mrs. Shea in complete surprise when told of the elopement. "It is almost incredible, but I suppose that as they have known each other for so long that they thought that it as well get married without waiting longer. I have known Mr. Wade for several years and regard him as an estimable young man. My daughter was given a month's vacation this Summer, and has about two weeks of it still remaining. She and Mr. Wade must have thought this with a good time to be married and surprise their friends."

Mrs. Shea seemed greatly surprised to return to the house at this time, but at once stated that the news was true. When told of the records, however, she stubbornly admitted that the news was true. She said that it had been intended to keep the news a secret for a while, because her husband was not of age. She added that the ceremony was performed by a Catholic clergyman, but would say nothing further.

HOME LEASED FOR PARASITES

Central Station to Be Provided by State for Care of Moth Fighters.

LYNN, July 21.—The State has leased the old Lake cottage at South Saugus as a home for the parasites which are expected to exterminate the gypsy and brown-tail moths. The lower floor will be used for the care of the parasites and the upper story will be the living place of the keeper and his family.

It is planned to have shipments of parasites made soon. They will be taken at once to the North shore, where it is said they will be kept during the Winter and their growth watched.

It is understood the experts will have special boxes placed in the trees so that the insects may be studied closely, and the time of the change in which may be learned in this way. In the spring the parasites will be turned loose in the infested districts. It is expected that millions of different parasites will be released from this cottage and sent into the districts infested with moths. The cottage is well adapted for the use to which it will be put. It is in the center of the district overrun by the brown-tails and was selected because of its location.

BOYS STOPPED A RUNAWAY

Three small boys figured in the capture of a runaway horse in Lynn on Thursday, rewarded with twenty-five cents each by the occupants of the carriage. The horse, attached to a rubber-tired runabout, became frightened while standing at the corner of Richlieu avenue and Linden street, while the driver and male friend were in a store. He ran for some distance, followed by Ralph Parker, twelve years old, of No. 5 Asplun way; Dana Gallagher, 12 years old, of No. 23 Haskell street, and Harold Roebuck, twelve, of No. 59 Linden street.

The boys caught up with the animal just as he struck a telegraph pole and extricated himself and the runabout up with it, smashing the latter quite badly. The harness he had on except the bridle. Young Parker jumped for the horse's head and held it down to the ground, while the other boys removed that part of the harness. They then stripped the horse of the pieces of harness and calmed him down until the persons who had been driving him arrived. The horse was badly cut.

Young Parker distinguished himself two weeks ago by rescuing a playmate from drowning in the Charles River.

ALDERMEN WERE TOO LIBERAL WITH MONEY

MEDFORD, July 21.—The Aldermen of this city will have to cut their vacations short and come back in time on Thursday evening to attend a special meeting called by the Mayor, all because they were wrongly appropriated more money for city expenses than is allowed under the State law.

Although the amount over-appropriated is but $5,000 its adjustment will be a matter of considerable difficulty, demanding the immediate attention of the Aldermen.

DESPONDENT WIDOW HANGS HERSELF

FALL RIVER, July 21.—Despondency over the hot weather and the loss of her husband caused Mrs. Mary Harrington, aged seventy-three years, to hang herself. She is an invalid and has been for a few months before the act she said she was unable to endure.

"You won't have to do anything for me much longer."

SLIGHT FIRE LOSS AT SHAWMUT BANK

Defective insulation caused a slight fire in the rooms of the National Shawmut Bank, corner of Congress and Water streets. It was discovered by S. M. Fetterer, who sent in an alarm. Engines returning from another fire extinguished it, and the loss will not reach over $200.

YOUNG GIRL IS TO SET OFF BIGGEST DYNAMITE EXPLOSION ON RECORD

MISS EDITH FOSTER

HENDERSONS POINT, PORTSMOUTH.

SCENE OF GIANT EXPLOSION AND GIRL WHO WILL SET IT OFF.

Forty-Ton Blast to Furnish Memorable Spectacle To-morrow at Henderson's Point, Portsmouth.

PORTSMOUTH, July 21.—At 4 o'clock to-morrow forty tons of dynamite will be exploded under water at Henderson's Point, and the resulting upheaval of rock and water is expected to be one of the most magnificent and thrilling sights on record on this coast. All is now ready, and nothing but the big explosion, the piece de resistance itself having taken second place in interest.

The giant blast is to be set off by Miss Edith M. Foster, daughter of Orlando Foster, superintendent of the Massachusetts Constructing Company, which has charge of the work of deepening the ship channel in the harbor channel, in connection with which the giant blast has been prepared.

Antique china and other priceless heirlooms of fragile composition are being carefully packed away in cotton-wool, and when the fateful hour arrives there will be few closed windows in the city, or in Kittery across the river, to suffer.

Some who have not any Eighteenth Century china to worry about have laid in a stock of absorbent cotton for ear-drum protecting purposes. A few have been busy looking up their fire insurance policies, to see if they contain any explosion clause, and one or two residents, it is rumored, have quietly left town to be gone over Sunday.

Dignitaries of Nation and State, including Governor Douglas of Massachusetts, a regiment of newspaper men and photographers, naval officers galore and the general public by thousands are looked for on the special train and trolley, and the picturesque shores of the Piscataqua, which Southern green and brown, is expected on Saturday to be white and black with nervestrung humanity.

Expect 20,000.

Some look to see as many as 15,000 or 20,000 visitors pour into the city to witness the greatest explosion that has ever taken place in this country since the memorable one at Hell Gate, at the entrance to the East River.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has issued special excursion tickets from Boston, Lynn, Salem, Newburyport, Amesbury, Seabrook, Portland, Dover, Manchester, Biddeford, Portland, Haverhill and other Nashua Junction, Kittery and other points within a radius of fifty or sixty miles.

In addition there are special delegations coming on from New York, Montreal and other more distant places, composed, for the most part, of reporters who have a professional interest in such explosions.

All Portsmouth itself will be on the water front, as a matter of course, and the occasion will be a sort of half-holiday, with flags flying all over the place, pink lemonade flowing like water, and most of the merchants concomitants of a Fourth of July celebration at hand, except brass bands and fireworks.

The fireworks, or rather the waterworks, will be furnished by the contractors, who have for twenty years been blasting away the rocky Henderson's Point, until now nothing but a comparatively thin, dynamite verified shell remains.

Just how imposing a spectacle the upheaval of ledge, water and timbers will be can only be conjectured, even by the experts. The latter are agreed on only one thing, and that is that the element of personal danger will be a very small one.

Like Volcanic Eruption.

They expect, from what data they have at hand relating to similar explosions, that the touching off of the forty odd tons of dynamite—the largest quantity of that explosive ever used at one time in this country—will raise a mountain of water, the twenty-foot blanket of water that will be something volcanic.

In any event, they are quite certain that its effects upon the thousands of spectators will be as harmless as the deliberation of the Russo-Japanese peace congress, soon to be held within a few yards of that very spot.

It has been decided that the original plan of having Miss Edith M. Foster, daughter of Superintendent Orlando A. Foster, of the forty, sixty and eighty-foot drill operate the switch that will simultaneously explode the 200 odd charges in the ledge, shall be carried out. A special stand from which this operation will take place has been erected by Superintendent Foster's direction on the side of the hill on Seavey's Island, near the wireless telegraph pole and standpipe.

The stand is situated outside the danger zone several hundred yards back of the point and at an elevation from which the speedy guests of the contracting company and Rear Admiral Mead, commandant of the navy yard, can look down upon the scene of the explosion.

Assisted by a gang of picked men, Chief Electrician Thomas F. Flanagan worked hard all day along the face of the ledge and coffer-dam putting in the last of the dynamite charges and placing the black, sneaky connecting wire in position.

When the wires are finally adjusted and tested and the pump, the sole remaining piece of apparatus in the pit, is removed, which will probably be to-day, the great excavation will be slowly flooded and another big will remain but to run the leading wire to the switch.

Superintendent Foster hopes to get the pit flooded on this afternoon's tide, but it is just possible that the operation will have to be postponed until a later tide.

Nerve-Trying Ordeal.

Since the work of putting the dynamite into the forty, sixty and eighty-foot drill holes began, it has been a nerve-trying period for all concerned, and everyone will breathe more freely when the water finally covers the results of three years' work.

There has always been the possibility of something happening to cause a premature explosion. Even a severe thunderstorm might be the cause of such a catastrophe, and th's has been a reason of them.

A blow-out of the ledge without the inertia of a wall of water to absorb the force of the explosion would be a joke to any who happened to be in the vicinity.

In its closest estimate, the big pile heads of solid slate and fringed around its outward horseshoe shell with a tall coffer-dam of stout piles, will be entirely sweeping skyward.

Then, almost as smooth as a cellar floor, and the sides of the shell, which are forty feet high, will be seen, and there by small cascades of sea water which the busy pump easily takes care of.

To-morrow all that will be seen will be a curving stretch of upright planks marking the coffer-dam, on the construction of which alone nearly $100,000 was expended.

No accident, of course, was allowed down in the pit, and even the more nervous of the contractors now look forward to the event with equanimity.

Extraordinary precautions looking to the safety of persons and property have been taken by the navy yard officials. Henderson's Point being practically a part of the government reservation.

Warning by Admiral.

The big new drydock will be flooded so as to obviate any bad effects from the concussion; the ammunition in the yard magazine will be placed on a coal barge and towed to the lower part of the harbor, and the windows in the different buildings will be properly arranged.

All the surplus dynamite not needed by the contractors will also be safely anchored away down the river.

Rear Admiral W. W. Mead, commandant of the navy yard, who starts in the general opinion that there will be no danger from flying rocks or a tidal wave, has issued these suggestions to the residents of Portsmouth, Kittery and Newcastle:

Brick chimneys and all small articles that are liable to fall from sudden jar should be secured.

"All windows and doors should be opened, and in houses in Newcastle, near the Point, people should avoid being in rooms where the plastering is liable to fall from a shock."

Admiral Mead further announces that the Navy Yard will be closed to visitors on Saturday, and only those having special passes will be admitted.

At 3:30 o'clock the steam whistle at the Navy Yard will give two long blasts, and from this time until after the explosion no boats will be allowed to pass below the stone beacon or above black buoy No. 9.

Comparatively few persons will witness the explosion from the Kittery side of the river. The best points of vantage will be on the Portsmouth and Newcastle side.

Pierce Island, immediately opposite Henderson's Point, and the islands adjoining, will be utilized by the populace. Pierce Island is about 600 feet distant from the ledge to be exploded and will be a favorite place with the photographers, professional and amateur.

As most of the wooden cofferdam is expected to be dislodged, few or three tow boats will be detailed near the scene to tow the floating timbers to a safe place.

WOULDN'T OPEN LINE ON FRIDAY

LYNN, July 21.—Respect for the superstition of ill luck attaching to an enterprise undertaken on Friday caused the management of the new electric railway from Lynn to Nahant to run the first public car over the line late yesterday afternoon instead of to-day, as had been originally planned. Now the officials are satisfied that they have defeated any "hoodoo" which might be connected with the line on Friday.

The car was in charge of Conductor Albert E. Richardson, and James B. MacLeod was motorman. The first passenger to pay fare was Mrs. Henry F. Merrill of Danvers. There were fourteen other passengers on the car. This first fare will be mounted and sent to the railroad commission of the State. To-day the service is regularly established.

Previous to the running of the anti-hoodoo car yesterday the officials and stockholders of the road had gone over it in a special car, being entertained at dinner afterward.

HEAT-DAZED IN STRANGE CITY

ROCKLAND, Me., July 21.—Claiming to be William W. Gordon, of Lynn, a stranger arrived here by train who appeared so hopelessly dazed and lost that he was taken to the police station, pending an investigation. He said his age was forty-two, and that he lived in Lynn with his son, Louis, and his daughter, Mrs. Heal.

HOUSE FALLS IN; LIVES IN PERIL

FALL RIVER, July 21.—The partial collapse of a two-story brick building on Third street, owned by the N. J. Borden heirs, drove the occupants into the street, in fear of their lives. The walls buckled and the floors gave way without warning. The ground floor was used for a bicycle repair shop, while four colored people occupied the second story.

BABY SAFE BUT WOMAN KILLED

TILTON, N. H., July 21.—Mrs. Edward Perry, aged twenty-three, died from injuries received by being thrown from a wagon.

With Mrs. Perry were her sister and six children. A wheel struck a stump, throwing out the party. The sister was holding the baby, which she threw to safety and then jumped clear herself.

POET SWINBURNE, AT 68, GIVES WORLD A NOVEL

BY JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

A novel is advertised this month, written by Algernon Charles Swinburne, the poet, now a man within two years of the biblical limit of three-score and ten. The candid enthusiast who writes the preliminary puffs of books for the advertising pages of the magazines says of this work: "The publication of a novel by the greatest of living English poets—the only novel he has ever written—is an event of unusual importance. Lovers of Swinburne's poems will find in his prose the same sweep of fancy, passion and ardor, and power of narration that his poetry possesses in so marked a degree. It will come as a surprise, however," continued this enthusiast, taking a fresh breath, "to find the pages filled with delicious humor and with the most epigrammatic, the tract-comedy growing out of the love affairs of four quite amusing people, while they play at cross-purposes, in an absorbingly full story."

Of course, a person clearing with enthusiasm, as this writer manifestly is, ought to deliver his message to the world, unaided by any one. Swinburne's genius and his urgent necessities, far-reasoning and far-seeing, make suits of hand-me-downs and Abraham Isaacs well without the aid of barkers and puffers in at the door of his modest shop. "Not a dog nor even a cigar store Indian warranted to sell Havana fillers." And how could a publisher get rid of his season's books without sending forward a herald to declare they are all, each in its line, the best thing ever written?

Each Book a Masterpiece.

Never, surely, in the history of the world have authors done work comparable with what they are doing to-day; each new volume is a masterpiece, if not the best ever written before, this is his most glorious effort; if this is not the book for you, for him at a bound abreast of the most skilful writers, then you are hopelessly and forever by chance score a failure? Not that the well-nourished Bourgeois ever heard of. Nor could he be induced to credit such an unworldly, ascetic, and, to most people, unattractive name as prompted him to fresh flights of eulogy. And he suffers from only the ordinary slanders of Mr. Swinburne's novel. I have not yet had an opportunity to read it myself—very likely, for that matter, the puffer himself has not delayed his arrival at the top of any such lofty bethe of a formality as that—but I mean to read it, and, after doing my will attempt to translate into words my own tumultuous impressions.

It is not the fault of the puffer, whose function is merely restricted by the terms of his compact with his employers, to blowing, not knowing, and how could he be expected, then, to know that Mr. Swinburne's novel is not a novel? Perhaps its he so finely calls him, had ever till his writers—anything but poetry. But because he has written poorly that he is the greatest of living English poets is he not?—and how could he be a poet were he a prose writer?

Not His Only Novel.

Well—but the fact is, nevertheless, that, although Mr. Swinburne is a poet and has written poetry, he is also a writer of prose. A surprising answer, is on its way—but it would be a surprise were it not. Instead, an open secret, which several thousand persons know, among them the librarian of the British Museum, Mr. Swinburne himself, and, I cannot help thinking, his publishers, in fact, it may be to the puffer alone that the revelation will "come as a surprise." She was not veiled—as old Vergilius said two thousand years ago; he who sets out to give us a surprise is veil'phed himself! When the puffer affirmed that this novel by the greatest of English poets was "the only novel he has ever written," he spoke not by the book, for the book that convicts him of error has been in existence at least six and twenty years, and he who indites these lines has read it. It is entitled "A Year's Letters," and was published in serial form in the year 1870, under the pseudonym of "Mrs. Horace Manners." So now that the cat is out of the bag, let us fasten her to the spouting table and quietly proceed to dissect her.

In the year 1870 I was living in London; and a friend of mine there was Mr. Robert H. Tiurellin, the novelist, author of many delectable stories, and a good fellow of the first water. It was he, and some other enterprising spirits conspired together to start a paper, to be known—after Sir Richard Steele's famous publication—as "The Tatler." It was to be a weekly journal of literature, society and of good things in general. It contained editorials, essays, reviews and some pages of epigrams and jurisdence written by Hallett Lord, known in those days as one of the wittiest and best-mannered men in London.

As Mrs. Horace Manners.

But the grand piece de resistence on which we counted for success was the manuscript of a serial novel by Algernon Charles Swinburne, which the enterprising editor had secured, and which was good enough, and wise and luminous and witty enough, and more than interesting enough, to make the fortune of any periodical except for one drawback from which it suffered; which was that Algernon had refused and taken it into his head that it would not do for him to allow it to be printed over his own name. When I say especially the greatest living English poets—takes a whim of this kind, it is useless for anybody to attempt to dissuade him. We could not judiciously tell him that Tuttiwee could launch only what his name alone that would conquer success; he would have said that if he didn't think the story good enough to print, none other, no matter, would send it back and go elsewhere. No; it was to be printed, he declared, or not at all it were, under the name of Mrs. Horace Manners; though after ward, when we represented that a woman of that name already existed, the widow of a famous American educationist, and, in fact, an author of my own, the poet consented to so far modify the pseudonym as to make it Mrs. Horace Manners; and, accordingly, this was the name finally printed on the title-page of the work, when it appeared in The Tatler.

Runs Its Course.

It ran its course, of about six months. I think, in the columns of the periodical; and those who read it commended it highly; only, inasmuch as no one had ever before heard of a Mrs. Horace Manners, the great public was not drawn to purchase our Tatler in anywhere near the numbers as would have been the case had it been known that we were running Swinburne as our novelist. The secret was only too well kept; and the poet, instead, perhaps, because British criticism did not rise as one man and proclaim Mrs. Horace Manners the greatest of living writers of prose fiction, declined to allow the serial when it was published in book form. It never was so published, and the Tatler itself, I regret to say, ceased to tatle after its first issue, and vanished, leaving no doubt of an excellence in advance of its speedy fate, which has since passed into oblivion. But, of course, the numbers of the paper were enshrined in the British Museum library, and the fact that Mrs. Horace Manners was Algernon Charles Swinburne did finally transpire, and was recorded in literary catalogues.

SERVICES AT 2ND CHURCH

The body of the late General Wilson W. Blackmar, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, will be followed by 3,000 veterans from the State House to the Second Church in Copley square, Sunday afternoon, where the funeral services will be held. The Sons of Veterans also will join in the parade, which is under the charge of Edward W. Kingsley Post 115.

A general order issued yesterday by Department Commander Wolff outlined the posts throughout the country of the death of their national commander and invited them to participate in paying him the final honors.

The body will be taken to the State House Sunday morning, where it will lie in state and the public will be permitted to look on the dead soldier from 9 to 12.30.

The parade will leave the State House Sunday at 12.30 under the command of Department Commander Wolff. The line of march is over Beacon street, to Arlington, to Boylston, to Copley square.

The only escort to Cedar Grove Cemetery, where the remains will be, is the post of which General Blackmar was a member, Edward W. Kingsley Post 115. The post will also meet the body at the Back Bay Station to-night.

"WHITE SLAVE'S" MURDER OF MASTER WAS JUSTIFIABLE, SAYS NAN PATTERSON

Former Florodora Girl Says Emil Gerdron Got What He Deserved, and That No Jury Ever Will Convict Berthe Claiche.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—Nan Patterson, the "Florodora" girl who was three times called to trial for the murder of "Caesar" Young and over whose head still hangs an indictment charging her with his death, has written exclusively for the AMERICAN of the case of Berthe Claiche, the young French woman now in a Tombs cell awaiting trial for killing her brutal master, Emile Gerdron.

Berthe Claiche, "White Slave," now under arrest on murder charge.

Naturally the former Florodora girl is intensely interested in the case of this other young woman, who must undergo the same terrible ordeal of imprisonment and trial as she herself underwent.

By Nan Patterson.

I am sorry for any one who has to stay in the Tombs—the name really makes me shudder!

Oh! How I wish I could help this poor girl, who must be suffering just as I suffered.

The law is a very queer thing, and before Miss Claiche goes out—if she ever does—she will have learned something of its eccentricities. One thing I would like to tell her: Trying will do no good. If she will persevere and keep back the tears, she will come out a new woman.

Many, many times I made all preparations to go out on a certain day, and just when I expected to walk out, either my lawyer or the District Attorney or somebody bobbed up and I was sent back to my dreary cell, crestfallen, to cry my eyes out. I felt so sad that I wished I were dead.

It is a feeling that can hardly be expressed in words. I suffered and suffered and no one seemed to care. The hardened keepers walked by the door of the cell and murmured, "Another cry baby."

I would throw myself on that hard little cot and cry so hard that Mrs. Stone, who is very kind-hearted, would come to me and try to cheer me up. I remember one she found me in such a condition, and she said:

Will Not Convict Her.

"Nan, you are so pale, you look like a dead fish."

Really, I felt like one and even wished I were one.

All this, and probably more, will Miss Claiche suffer, for the law must take its course, even if it does not take her life for killing this wolf in the garb of a man.

I read with interest the stories printed about Miss Claiche. I hope that she will have the district attorney unable to convict her.

She shot him. Three or four persons saw her do it and, if the law would permit, she would testify against herself and swear she did it, yet no one could make me believe that twelve men can be secured who will vote to take this girl's life for that brute's, whose mind and intellect was as low as a monkey's.

It is an awful thing to take a life for a life, but this crime was perfectly justifiable and, I might say, charitable.

Got What He Deserved.

This man Gerdron got just what he deserved and had I been in her position, as I understand it from what I have read, I would have done the same thing.

Yet, she loved him, even as his slave. She endured his brutality for years. How a woman can love a man who breaks all his promises and beat her when she asked him to marry her I cannot understand.

I want to tell a short story a young girl told while I was in the Tombs.

She was, perhaps, twenty years old. It was during my hours at church that I met her. I was attracted by the handsome shape her head. When I spoke to her first I noticed her eyes were red.

"I wish I was dead," she said, and then she told me how she loved a young man with whom she eloped. He refused to marry her and made her life miserable. Miss Claiche.

It was then that I first learned of the type of Gerdron. He had beaten her terribly when she refused to give the amount of money he asked for and then stole her out of the house. She screamed and attracted the police. Although bleeding from cuts about the head and face, she would not make a complaint against the man and so she was locked up.

She was in the Tombs only a few days and I read her many of the little dainties that were sent to me, and she promised to leave the man and get work. I don't think she did or ever will. She admitted she could do nothing but housework, and, although I gave her a woman's address, she never went there.

When you are a prisoner of course you have nothing to do but think and worry yourself sick, and when you are let out for a walk naturally some one will pick you out to tell you their troubles.

Life Is Beyond Belief.

I was in the Tombs almost a year and heard so many stories that I have often thought of putting them in book form.

I would like to write Miss Claiche, and probably I will next week. If I can do anything for her I certainly will.

The life that some of these girls have to live—I know from what they have told me—is almost beyond belief. The police know of it, according to these girls, even going so far as to sell to men of Gerdron's type tickets for police benefits and picnics and other things.

I was so astonished at another story a girl related to me that I told my lawyer, but he said: "Everybody knows that, and you can't help it."

These "Gerdrons" could all be sent away for many years if they did not hold their slaves in such terror. Whenever a girl tells a magistrate about this monster system a warrant is issued, and the girl is watched. She appears once in court, the case is postponed, and the girl then disappears. She probably has been beaten and sent away by her master's friends and, of course, without a complainant, he is discharged.

NAN PATTERSON GAMBLES AGAIN AT RACE TRACK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—Nan Patterson turned up at the Brighton race track and more to join in the excitement of gambling on a part of that mad life against which Recorder Goff so solemnly warned her when, for the second time, twelve men were unable to decide whether or not she had deliberately slain "Caesar" Young, the bookmaker, with whom she used to attend the races.

Two months and a week ago, with the prison pallor on her drawn face and tears in her eyes, this young woman on her release from the Tombs declared she would lead the recorder's advice. Now, blooming, vivacious, and dressed for the minority which she seemed to court, she appeared at the track where, Rand contended, she planned the death of Young, and from a handbag she pulled a fat roll of bills and bet $10 on a horse.

She watched the race on Opice, the light of a gambler's excitement gleaming in her eyes, and when the horse failed to cross the wire first, made a pretty mouth and frowned. Then she turned and quoted conversation.

Nan Patterson went to the races in a big automobile. She was accompanied by a woman whom she introduced as Miss Violet Cyell, of the "Ben Hur" company. She wore a clinging gown of pale blue and colored stuff, and a big white hat with an ostrich plume so long that it trailed to her shoulders. She sat in a conspicuous place behind the judges' and grand stand, all smiles and dimples and undiscurbed by the attention which her presence attracted.

A man passing in front of the stand stopped and looked squarely at Nan Patterson. She returned his stare, but neither gave any sign of recognition. The man was Leslie Coggins, to whom she wrote the "Cry Baby" letter introduced at the last trial, and which was written at the time she professed to be so much in love with "Caesar" Young.

"You know well enough when I was at the track the last time," she said to a questioner. "It's the same crowd of hungry-eyed hustlers, always trying, but good as far away from getting rich as ever."

Then she shrugged her shoulders and looked over her program.

$40,000 FOR DOGS AND CATS

Special to the Boston American.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., July 20.—After all my just and lawful debts are paid I decree that the sum of $5,000 be paid my only child, Laura Everington Kneeware. I ask that the object of this part of my will is carried out."

This is the will that was found in a desk that had been used by Mrs. Ellen J. Kneeware, an eccentric widow, who died at Lasalle June 25, leaving an estate valued at $15,000.

LOST FIGHT TO CAMERA MAN

NEWPORT, R. I., July 21.—Objecting to being photographed in the street without his permission, Henry S. Lehr became the central figure in a lively controversy in front of the Casino. Alone he failed to cope successfully with the man with the camera, but having called Captain Crowley and a policeman to his assistance he succeeded in having the objectionable man removed.

Mrs. Adelia Sands, who seemed to see the funny side of the affair, called upon volunteers to smash the camera, but by that time the police had put an end to the trouble.

Mr. Lehr, who drove up with Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle, of Philadelphia, had just alighted from an automobile, when a man poked a camera in his face. Believing his photograph had been taken, Mr. Lehr demanded the camera, which the owner declined to give up.

Mr. Lehr complained to a policeman, at which the man took another picture of Mr. Lehr and the policeman together, with Mr. Lehr making moves to cover his face with his arm. Chief Crowley then appeared upon the scene, and on complaint of Mr. Lehr the chief ordered the man to desist. Mr. Lehr appeared to have plenty of acquaintances, and it would not have taken much to have brought on an encounter.

BLAZING GIRL HURLS HERSELF THREE STORIES

Gasolene Flames Ignite Dress and Are Extinguished When She Strikes Street.

Crazed by pain from flames which had ignited her clothing and transformed her into a living torch, Sadie Levine, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Levine of No. 59 Corning street, hurled herself headlong from a third-story window to the street. She escaped injury from the fall by a miracle, and as the momentum caused her to roll over upon the ground, the flames were partly extinguished. Louis Adler, a friend of the family, then kept her rolling until the flames had all died out.

The girl had been cleaning furniture with gasolene and a candle she carried set fire to an oil-soaked chair, the flames then igniting her dress.

Her family were in an adjoining room and powerless to aid her. It is thought, at the city hospital, that she will recover.

She is seriously burned about the body, face and head, her knee is dislocated, and she has a scalp wound.

Asked by one of the surgeons in Ward L, City Hospital, why she threw herself from the window, the girl said that she was because of something her teacher, Miss Regan, at the Winthrop School, had once told her.

"Miss Regan said that if anything ever got afire in a room to throw it out of the window quick," said the child.

"That was all that I thought of when I knew that I was all afire. My mother and my sister were screaming and trying to get at me, but I saw the window open, and the thought came to me to throw myself out of the window. So I just jumped."

TWO BROTHERS LOST LIVES IN COLLISION

The steamer Penobscot reports colliding with a small fishing boat off Wolf Island, N. B. in a fog on Wednesday. There were two men on board, one of whom jumped off the boat and the other fell overboard. The steamer launched a boat, but was unable to pick up the men, whom it was learned on arrival at Eastport, were two brothers, Ray and Maurice Wayne of Musquash, N.B.

Continued cool weather in Boston and New England is promised to-day by Weather Forecaster Smith. The thermometer hovered between 60 and 70 degrees during the night. At 8 o'clock the mercury registered 69 degrees, at 9 it was 71, and at 10 o'clock 72 degrees. In all Boston's suburbs the temperature was from four to ten degrees lower than yesterday, and the humidity averaged seventeen per cent. lower.

To-day's delicious coolness with low humidity is the result of an area of lower temperature which formed in Ontario and swept down to the Eastern part of the continent. It has brought relief to millions upon millions of suffering humanity. With the exception of the extreme Northwest and the cities on the South Atlantic coast, the whole has contentedly enjoyed with the Hub a respite from the unbearable high temperatures. Washington, N. C., and Savannah, Ga., reported the highest figures, where 96 was recorded in each instance. Havre, Mont., was a close second, with 94. Philadelphia was the hottest of any of the eastern cities. There the 90 point was reached for a short time during the afternoon yesterday. New York was comparatively cool with 86 as the maximum the same as Boston. Chicago reported the same her top-notch record was ten degrees cooler, the highest for the day being only 76. Portland, Me., was the coolest spot in New England, the ocean breezes sending the thermometer down to the 66 mark.

KLINE GREETS GEN. WHITNEY WITH A SMILE

Tells State Detective at La Junta That He Is Willing to Come Back.

LA JUNTA, Col., July 21.—Delayed by a wrecked train en route, General J. H. Whitney, of the Massachusetts State police, arrived here several hours behind time to take back to Massachusetts John Kline, alias Schildefski, who has confessed the murder of his wife on the links of the Arlington Golf Club at Belmont in that State.

General Whitney will remain here until State Officer Rhoades arrives with the Grand Jury indictment. When Rhoades reaches here Sunday morning he will go to Denver to secure requisition papers.

According to General Whitney, the two detectives expect to start East with their prisoner about the middle of next week. Kline will be securely ironed on the railroad trip to provide against any attempt to escape.

When Kline met General Whitney he greeted him with a smile and offered his hand. The officer accepted, and gave Kline a hearty shake.

"I'm feeling fine," Kline replied, when asked regarding his health. "I know what you've been for, and I am in good condition to go back with you. I've decided now to go without the requisition, although I know what that means since it was explained by an attorney. You see, I've taken pains to get posted on the laws, and I've learned a few things in the last few days."

Willing to Go Back.

Kline even smiled when making these remarks. Yesterday he declared that a conspiracy had been formed to take him back to Boston for the purpose of putting him to death instantly. He protested against being returned. Now he says he was only too willing to reach there, and made no reference to the probable fate that awaited him. He chatted with General Whitney after the manner of a happy schoolboy.

Kline an Atheist.

"What is your opinion of the prisoner?" General Whitney was asked.

"I don't know that it was to be just to express it, at this time, as he has not been tried. I will say that he seems indifferent to the serious charge brought against him and that he does not seem to realize the gravity of his position. I spoke to him on this matter and he said that he was an atheist, that he did not believe in heaven or hell and that he had no fear of either. As to his guilt I can express no opinion, and I presume I have not been asked for one."

General Whitney refused to say whether the prisoner had made any statement that he believed from his knowledge of the case to be untrue. It was called to his attention that the prisoner had contradicted himself as to whether he had thrown over the knife or the rock in his attack on the victim.

"I know this, but from my knowledge of anatomy I know that the knife was used first. If the woman's skull had been crushed before the knife-wounds were given there would have been but little blood, as the heart would have been paralyzed. I am confident that this is one instance where he has contradicted himself."

Wanted Trial in Russia.

"Did he ask you to try and arrange matters so that he could be tried in Russia?"

"He did, and when I said that he would get justice in the courts of Massachusetts he said that he would have an advantage in Russia for the reason that they killed murderers in America regardless of the condition of insanity, while in Russia, he claimed, that a murderer of an unconscious crime in a drunken frenzy was sentenced to work for life in the mines of Siberia."

POLICE SPOIL LOVE ROMANCE

Fourteen-Year-Old Girl Taken from Curly-Haired Lover on Merry-Go-Round.

ELOPEMENT IS STOPPED

MATTAPOISETT, July 21.—Love's young dream for Miss Hattie Harlow of Wilmson has been ruthlessly shattered by two burly constables, and a pretty romance of the merry-go-round, which was tending to a full-fledged elopement, has been brought to an abrupt end.

Miss Harlow, with her parents, is spending the Summer here and is among the most prominent of the Summer colonists. Recently a travelling merry-go-round came here, with Clarence Chase of Marion as employe. He was handsome, had curly hair, and Miss Harlow declared he was "just lovely." She spent much of her time on the carousel with Chase as a companion, and when the enterprise pulled up stakes and went to Parker Mills in Marion, she followed.

She was found at the home of the young man's mother there, but fled to the woods when the constable who had been sent by her father, appeared, returning with her face and arms swollen from mosquito bites, when they left. She was later discovered by the constables on the merry-go-round and, after a chase of a quarter of a mile, was captured. In the race one officer was sent sprawling by young Chase, who says he "accidentally" struck the constable's beat.

The girl is fourteen years old, tall, very pretty, and is something of an athlete. She is now at her home here, under guard to see that she does not run away again to meet her curly-haired lover.

MILLIONAIRES BAR OUT AUTOS

LENOX, July 21.—The millionaire residents of Lenox have closed to automobiles fifteen miles of the finest roads in the town.

Many of the streets are narrow and accidents were feared to horses. The only protestants are Edward R. Wharton of Boston and Mrs. George Westinghouse

SAVED FROM SEA BY FISHERMEN

SWAMPSCOTT, July 21.—After clinging to an overturned boat for an hour, being thrown back into the water time after time because their hands slipped, Charles H. Mason, Jr., aged twenty, and Frederick C. Thompson, aged eighteen, both of New York, and guests at the Little Anawam Hotel, were saved from drowning by three unknown fishermen.

MRS. FISH ACTS AS FIRE FIGHTER

NEWPORT, R. I., July 21.—The vigilance of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish saved her stable and villa from fire. She happened to look from her window and saw that the electric wires in the stable were emitting sparks. She sounded the fire alarm and directed the work of employes herself.

HEAT-DAZED IN STRANGE CITY

ROCKLAND, Me., July 21.—Claiming to be William W. Gordon, of Lynn, a stranger arrived here by train who appeared so hopelessly dazed and lost that he was taken to the police station, pending an investigation. He said his age was eighty-two, and that he lived in Lynn with his son, Louis, and his daughter, Mrs. Heal.

HOUSE FALLS IN; LIVES IN PERIL

FALL RIVER, July 21.—The partial collapse of a two-story brick building on Third street, owned by the N. J. Borden heirs, drove the occupants into the street, in fear of their lives. The walls buckled and the floors give way without warning. The ground floor was used for a bicycle repair shop, while four colored people occupied the second story.

BABY SAFE BUT WOMAN KILLED

TILTON, N. H., July 21.—Mrs. Edward Perry, aged twenty-three, died from injuries received by being thrown from a wagon.

With Mrs. Perry were her sister and six children. A wheel struck a stump, throwing out the party. The sister was holding the baby, which she threw to safety and then jumped clear herself.

100 YEARS MAN'S NATURAL LIFE

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 20.—Sir James C. Browne, the author of various works on mental and nervous diseases, in an address to the Public Health Congress, declared it was a good working hypothesis to regard the natural life of a man as a hundred years.

He did not agree with Professor Osler and others that the world's effective, vitalizing work was done between the ages of 25 and 40. Much of the world's best work, he said, had been done by men over 40. If the world were deprived of their work it would go back to the twilight of ages ago.

He quoted numerous cases to prove his contention. He urged that it was a duty to lengthen as well as to strengthen life. He added that every man was entitled to a century and every woman to a little more. Every child should be impressed with the obligation of living to a hundred years, and should be taught to avoid irregularities in living which tend to prevent the attainment of this ambition. While it was certain that a century of health and vigor could be attained, it could only be reached by faithful obedience to the laws of health and simplicity and tranquility in living.

HEROINE SAVES 2 FROM DEATH

Clutching with one hand two helpless girls and holding them above water, while with the other hand she managed to keep herself afloat in the waters of the Charles River at the swimming pool near the foot of Flagg street, Cambridge, Louisa Beatty made a desperate and successful struggle to save the lives of two drowning girls who had ventured beyond their depth.

The two girls, Miss Lena Russell of No. 74 Dunster street and Miss Mary Murphy of No. 76 Dunster street were bathing a short distance from shore. None was beyond her depth, but suddenly the Murphy and Russell girls stepped into a hole and disappeared from sight.

Miss Beatty heard the cries and dived from the bathhouse pier, catching the two sinking girls as they came up the first time, and holding them fast until Patrolman John F. Powers came.

DUCHESS COMES IN SEPTEMBER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The Duchess of Marlborough will visit this country next September with her elder son, the Marquis of Blandford. They will sail from England Sept. 13 or 15, and will go directly to Brook Holt, the estate of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, near Westbury L. I. By that time the Duchess's mother will have closed her Newport villa, Marble House.

The Duchess will stay in America ten weeks, until the New York Horse Show.

It is almost two years since the former Consuelo Vanderbilt has been in America, she is the most popular of the three American born duchesses. Mrs. Belmont, her mother, is now more closely identified with the Meadow Brook than with the Newport set, and autumn is the active social season in and about Westbury.

SEPT. 6 SET TO HEAR TUCKER

The Chief Justice has set September 6 as the date when it will be finally decided whether Charles L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Mabel Page, may be entitled to a new trial.

The amended bill of exceptions has been completed by Vahey, Innes and Mansfield, Tucker's attorneys, and will be filed within a few days. The amendment states merely that both sides agree to accept the official report of the trial as correct so far as it affects material quotations of testimony printed in the bill of exceptions. The Attorney-General has agreed to this.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., July 21.—William J. Bryan has been awarded by the courts a fee of $2,500 for services in settling the estate of Philo S. Bennett, of which he was executor. Mrs. Bennett will probably appeal to the higher court.

JAPS STRIKE IN HAWAII; TROOPS OF U. S. CALLED

Labor Situation on Island Leads to Report to the War Department.

SEVERAL THOUSAND IN IT

Washington, July 21.—The labor situation in the Hawaiian Islands, where several thousand Japanese laborers on sugar plantations are on strike, has led to representation to the War Department that it call for the use of United States troops might be expected at any time. There are two companies of artillery at Hawaii, and in their place request was made for four companies of infantry.

The situation was presented to the department in a memorandum from Lieutenant-Colonel John McClellan, commanding the post at Honolulu. In it he states that the Hawaiian Legislature has refused to appropriate anything for the support of the National Guard; that heretofore the police have been relied upon to quell strike disturbances, but that recently the Japanese have shown an entire disregard of the police. The Governor had taken the matter up to ascertain exactly his authority in calling upon the Federal troops, and had been informed that under the law such a call would be responded to.

The matter was referred to General Davis, judge advocate-general of the army, and his memorandum on the subject was approved to-day by General Oliver, acting Secretary of War. In this memorandum General Davis says:

"I gather that there is a disposition on the part of the Hawaiian Legislature to evade making provision for the preservation of order, and to suffer the duty of police protection upon the War Department. If such be the case, the conclusion, 'the Governor should be advised to call the Legislature together for the purpose of making adequate provision for the protection of life and property in the Hawaiian Islands.'"

A second memorandum from Colonel McClellan states that the Japanese have control of the situation by reason of the scarcity of labor on sugar plantations, and from the further fact that many Japanese are leaving the islands for California.

JUSTICE DEUEL MEETS CHARGE

Books of Town Topics Show He Has Salary in Violation of City Charter.

NEW YORK, July 21.—Justice Deuel declares that he has nothing to concur and is ready to meet the charges that his name has been mentioned in the Town Topics in violation of the city charter. The charter declares that no judge of general sessions shall receive as fee or perquisites, or carry on any business or practice as an attorney, but shall devote his whole time and capacity to the duties of his office.

Town Topics's books show that Justice Deuel received, in fees for the calendar, the sum of $1,000, and 1902, 1903 and 1904 he received $1,200, which he owns thirty shares of its stock. As dividends, he also received $1,200 in 1901 and a like amount in 1902.

It has been learned that William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Reginald and Alfred Vanderbilt each paid $1,500 as subscription to the Fish and Fenelon District Attorney Jerome is anxious to learn why Clarence Lexow had to pay $2,500 and Mrs. Chilis P. Huntington $10,000 for the same thing.

SULLIVAN MAY BE PUZZLE FOR BRITT

BY TAD.

Jimmy Britt and Kid Sullivan meet in the ring at Frisco to-night. Sullivan, although not a champion, is considered by those on the inner rail as be one of the toughest and strongest little fellows in the sort of sportdom attaches little weight to what is supposed to have happened to the Nelson-Sullivan scuffle. Nelson is known to be a slow starter—the last man in the world, in fact, to accomplish anything startling in a six-round bout. Another thing advanced in defence of Nelson's mediocre performance is that he

NOW, OPEN YOUR MOUTH AND SHUT YOUR EYES
QUE GANS IS TEACHING SUL A FEW TRICKS.
KID SULLIVAN WHO FIGHTS BRITT FRIDAY NIGHT IN FRISCO
THE KID LOOKS LIKE A CONDEMNED SHARKEY

133 pound division now.

He is not clever, he is not a demon with the hunch, but he is a sticker from the ground up. His build is after the style of Sharkey. They say he would have made a great wrestler with the muscles and build he packs around, but Joe Gans, who discovered Rolly, thought he would make a better fighter, and for two years he has been teaching him the ins and outs of the great game.

Sullivan, by the way, is a nickname. His real name is Harry Sheehy. Well, Sheehy formerly worked in a brick yard, and later in a hay barn, where he tossed the bales around until one Baltimore coon found him. The early years stood Sully well, for now the strength that he gained pushing around clay and grain goes toward warping opponents in the ring.

Joe Gans is handling the new money getter at San Rafael, and is teaching him all the tricks that he used in the ring when he was in his prime. Joe is teaching Sul the right cross now, and says that if he ever crosses James with it—good night. A great many others have said that before fights with Britt, but somehow or other the wily James gets away from them and tells his way to a win.

From present indications Britt will be a 2 to 1 favorite over the Baltimore man, but they are not betting that. Britt finishes him before the limit. Sullivan looks too young and strong to be punched to sleep by a man with Britt's wallop, and sports out there are a bit wary of such betting.

BRITT IS A BIG FAVORITE AT 10-4 ODDS

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 21.—To-night Jimmy Britt of California and "Kid" Sullivan of Washington meet in the ring at Woodward's Pavilion, and if the boys box to their usual form a large crowd will see a bout of a blizzardly character.

That the members of the inner temple do not think quite highly well of Sullivan's chances is shown by the betting. Britt being on the long end of a 10 to 4 market. In view of the manner in which Sullivan handled Battling Nelson in a recent contest in Baltimore, this is quite a compliment to Britt.

It suggests, of course, that the smart

NARRAGANSETT HANDICAPS.

The following handicaps of to-day's races at Narragansett Park were made for the BOSTON AMERICAN by one of the most skillful handicappers on the American turf. He has been following the races at New York for fifteen years, and is thoroughly familiar with the form of every horse entered to-day. These handicaps will appear every racing day throughout the meeting.

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, July 21.—All the races to-day promise to furnish lively contests and close finishes. It is just an ordinary overnight card, with one handicap to take the place of a steeple event.

In the handicap some fast sprinters are engaged, and as Freen has been quite recently showing his best form he should win. Toscan is sure to give him an argument, and if Freen is in the least inclined to shirk it in the early part the game son of Hastings will cause trouble. Neptunus is a fast colt without a great deal of class, but improving. He might give Tokalon rather more than he wants when it comes down to settling the short one.

Princess Tulane should run off with the first race, and if Rose Mamie gets a good ride she is quite likely to land the second. Tangier to lose.

Minita looks very promising in the third, and at the weights she is not likely to be beaten.

Speedway should be able to last long enough to win the closing event, although the distance is rather far for her.

Handicapped for a Fast Track.

GAMES SCHEDULED TO-DAY.

Chicago at Boston.
St. Louis at New York.
Cincinnati at Brooklyn.
Pittsburg at Philadelphia.

GAMES YESTERDAY.

At Boston—First game—Chicago, 3; Boston, 2. Second game—Boston, 3; Chicago, 1.
At New York—First game—New York, 7; Cincinnati, 4. Second game—New York, 2; St. Louis, 1.
At Philadelphia—First game—Pittsburg, 7; Philadelphia, 6. Second game postponed (rain).
At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 2; Cincinnati, 1.

With the series standing one each, Chicago and the Hub Nationals will line up at the South End grounds this afternoon, both confident of winning the rubber game. Chick Fraser is scheduled to go on the firing line for the home organization, and he says he is fit to put up the battle of his life. He warmed up yesterday and his arm looked up better. Moran will do the backstopping.

Both of yesterday's games were good ones, the first was won by ability of the part of the Windy City batters to land on Young at the opportune time. In the second game the home swatsmen found both Wicker and Lundgren fairly easy pickings.

SHERIDAN AFTER DISCUS RECORD

Martin J. Sheridan, the greatest all around athlete the world has ever seen, holder of the world's record at discus throwing, is certain that the mark now held by him will be wiped off the boards at the St. Augustine's field day games at Locust street grounds, Dorchester, to-morrow afternoon.

Sheridan has been paying great attention to this specialty as he realizes that the great Western weight men, Ralph Rose and W. Garrels, are eager to take the honor from him. In consequence of same, Sheridan feels sure that he will set a mark that will not be easily approached by anyone.

Sheridan will also compete in the running high jump, putting 16 pound shot, 120 yards high hurdles and running hop, step and jump.

Others who will appear are: Floyd J. Porter, intercollegiate champion shot putter; W. W. Cox, New England's greatest all round athlete; Thomas Conroy, intercollegiate champion mile runner; W. B. Eaton, New England's champion pole vaulter; Gibbey, New England's high jump champion; Thomas Cronin, New England's best running hop, step and jumper, with other local stars there should be nothing lacking for "simon pure" competition.

The games start promptly at 2 o'clock.

WORKING BOYS' HOME GAMES

In the track-and-field tournament, which will be one of the events in the "Young Gymkhana Sports" to be given at the American League baseball grounds, Hopkinton avenue, tomorrow, for the benefit of the Working Boys' Home, three of the most prominent teams entered are the Clan Cameron team of East Boston, the Dudley (J. A. O. H. team of East Dedham and the Granite Workers team of Quincy. These teams have won numerous tug of war competitions and will battle stubbornly for honors and prize at the games, Saturday afternoon.

The wrestling competition between James Gilligan of Lawrence and Jean Gerrior of East Boston promises to be an exciting and interesting event, as both men are known, even among the best wrestlers, as stubborn. They will lock together for supremacy. They will be to outdo the old blood, as each is anxious to outdo the other, for reasons other than those held out by the prize offered.

The whistler race a distinct novelty to the Boston public, is creating a great deal of interest and will prove very attractive. It will be a highly exciting and amusing contest.

All the other games and sports, which include 30 to 40 in all, are exciting and training in character and include a broad jump contest between Coughlin and Swordsmen, a stick pulling match, a single stick competition, a shirt race, a barrel race, one and cake and egg and spoon race, one for girls, pie-eating and doughnut eating matches for boys, and an Irish dancing competition, etc.

AMERICAN BOAT CAPTURES RACE

Special to the Boston American.

MONTREAL, July 21.—The first race for the Seawanhaka International challenge cup for small yachts was won by the American yacht, Manchester, the challenger. She finished three minutes ahead of the Alexandria, the defender.

The race was to windward and return, a two-mile beat, and a two-mile run, three times around, making in all a twelve-mile course.

After the Manchester took the lead on the first beat the race was devoid of incident. Both boats were handled excellently.

TENNIS TEAMS ARE SELECTED

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 21.—Holcombe Ward and William A. Larned have been selected for the singles, and Ward and Beals C. Wright for the doubles, in the challenge round for the Dwight F. Davis international tennis trophy, play for which will be begun at Wimbledon to-day, but the right is retained to change these nominations at the last moment.

N. E. LEAGUE RESULTS.

At Nashua—Concord, 7—Nashua, 6 (ten innings).
At Lynn—Lynn, 4; New Bedford, 3.
At Fall River—Fall River, 15; Haverhill, 3.
At Lowell—Lowell-Manchester, rain.

O'BRIEN READY FOR FORBES

Rouse O'Brien was never in better condition in his fighting career, as he has trained faithfully for his bout with Harry Forbes at the Douglas A. C. next Tuesday night, as he knows that he meets the fastest boy of his weight in the country.

Forbes is expected in the Hub to-day, as he has left the Windy City en route for the East.

The South Boston boy wants to win badly over Forbes, as he knows that Forbes has an international reputation and it would give him opportunities that other match could to gain a victory over the celebrated bantam.

GOODMAN IN BIG BOUT.

Kid Goodman is practically matched to box in Philadelphia next week at the National A. C., his opponent to be Abe Attell or Young Corbett. His bout with Young Erne convinced the fans in Brockton that the Kid was about the right boy to put against the top-notchers, and they want to see him perform, as they like his aggressive style.

N.-E. BREEDERS' CLUB FORMED

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., July 21.—The New England Breeders' Club was organized in this city, with the choice of the following officers: President, Andrew Miller, New York; vice-presidents, R. E. Wilson, Jr., New York; T. Nelson Hastings, Walpole; treasurer, William Bisnett, New York; clerk, Henry F. Hollis, Concord; directors, Messrs. Miller, Wilson and James S. Metcalfe of New York, O. H. P. Belmont of New York is chairman of the board of governors.

FRANK ADAMS IN SHAPE.

That clever Newton boy, Frank Adams, is in the best of shape, and his manager, Ikey Woods, wants to match him against any of the 126-pound boys in New England, and picks out Benny Cain as his rightful game. Frank Knessil, in the same stable, will meet any of the 118-126-pound lads, and prefers Fred O'Brien or Tommy English.

JESSE TANNEHILL TO PITCH TO-DAY'S GAME

Special to the Boston American.

CLEVELAND, July 21.—Beaten, but not disheartened, the Boston's wended their way back to the hotel after another double defeat in as many days by the "cream city champions."

Old Cy Young, who has everything up his sleeve that a pitcher needs most, could not stem the victorious Naps. But Bill Dinneen pitched a good game and ordinarily would have won the contest, but all clubs look alike to the Naps, and with the luck that followed in yesterday nothing can stop them.

Think of Charlie Carr, who has adorned the bench most of the season, on account of poor batting, hitting a nice triple with two men on bases. There were cheers deafening, long and loud for Charley.

Old Cy, who pitched twenty innings against "Iron Rube" the other day and held the Athletics down, could do no more than give the club with the Cleveland luck.

Champs Started the Scoring.

The Champs started the scoring in the second game and held the lead until Carr decided that he needed a regular pasting, and it was necessary to "do something" right there, and he did it. Dinneen was pitching a good game at the time.

The Cleveland fans are in the zenith of happiness over Bill Bernhard's good showing and hope for Larry's speedy recovery so as to have the team make a runaway of the pennant race.

Cleveland had five errors in the second one game, while the Champs had only one. The hits were even, eight apiece, both the Naps and the Champs got down the errors were even and each team earned two runs. Again the Naps won.

May Be Boston's Turn.

But Cleveland has had her share of hard luck and perhaps it's Boston's turn.

Big Bernhard will try to keep up the Naps' winning gait, while Jesse Tannehill will do the heavy work for the Champs. Collins is not claiming anything just yet, as the luck of the Naps bunts the left hind foot of a rabbit caught in a graveyard at midnight. However, Bernhard is not been a winning pitcher this year and is thought that the Champs will annex the game to-day.

GRIFFITH JUST A TOOL FOR RINGLEADERS

Special to the Boston American.

CLEVELAND, July 21.—Judge Kohl of the local Common Pleas Court issued a restraining order forbidding the trial of Howard C. Griffith of Jersey City by a committee of Managers in baseball matters on a charge of trying to wreck the American League and further forbade the publishing of any facts concerning the trial, should it already have taken place. The hearing in court will come up next Monday.

It developed at the meeting of the national commission, it is said, that Howard Griffith was only employed as a tool by the ringleaders in the formation of this "class A" organization that was to disrupt the two major organizations.

In an interview Ban Johnson said that Tom J. Hyrne of the Columbus team, W. H. Watkins of the Minneapolis and Indianapolis clubs, George Tebeau and George Stallings were just as guilty of conspiracy and collusion as Howard Griffith.

GALLAGHER TO GO ABROAD

Special to the Boston American.

TOLEDO, O., July 21.—George Ketcham, owner of the stallion Crescens, has just closed a deal for Gallagher, 2 08¼, the handsome pacer, now at the Windsor track.

Ketcham will soon bring the pacer to his stables here, and later will ship him to Europe, where Gallagher, Chas. for whom the horse was purchased.

TO PLAY M. J. BURLEYS.

A very interesting game of ball is expected at St. Augustine's Field Day to-morrow at the Locust street grounds, when the strong 8S. Peter and Paul team of the lower part of South Boston are to meet the M. J. Burleys of the "Point" for a purse of money. The 8S. Peter and Paul team is considered a very strong attraction just now, as on last Saturday, at the Douglas club picnic at Cox island, they defeated St. Vincent's Holy Name first team by a score of 9 to 8. O'Brien, who did the twirling on that occasion, will be in the box again and a fine game is expected.

NASHUA FAIR ASS'N MEET

The Nashua Fair Association will give a meeting for half-mile track horses the first week in August, which is the week of the fair. Handsome purses will be given in order to give the regular half-mile horse racers a chance to race while the mile track horses are resting. Entries close to-night with the secretary, M. C. Mullen. The classes are: Trotting, 2:14, 2:18, 2:20, 2:22, 2:24, 2:30 and 2:40; pacing, 2:10, 2:12, 2:14, 2:16, 2:18, 2:20, 2:25, 2:35 and free for all.

BLACK FITZ WILL BOX.

Black Fitzsimmons will be one of the principals at the opening of the Unity Club in Lawrence, and his opponent is to be selected, but it looks like George Gardner. He wants to meet Gardner, and would be a good card for any of the big ones, as he has been here more fight in them an any pair that ever appeared in the ring.

CHARLES RIVER PARK TO OPEN

Things begin to look brighter for Charles River Park, for Jack Prince has been over the ground carefully and has taken a lease of the property. His first move will be to put down a mile motor cycles of the type seen on the road. It will be held during the annual meet of the Federation of American Motor Cyclists Saturday afternoon, August 12. The meet has the official sanction of the organization, and it is the most important meet ships will be decided. Thousands of motor cyclists are going to attend from all parts of the country. The last meeting of the body, which was held in Maryland, attracted 15,000 persons to the race.

EGAN DEFEATS PERRY.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Match play in the first round for the Havenoaks, Solace and Tree cups was started at Onwentsia, when Chandler Egan, who Wednesday broke the records for the course at thirty-six holes, met Arthur Perry of Windsor, Egan won by seven up and six to play.

Narragansett Races.

Complete results of the races at Narragansett Park will be found in the "8 P. M. and Baseball" Edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN every night.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF LOVE

FIRST
Thou shalt have no other love but me.

SECOND
Trust me all in all or not at all.

THIRD
Thou shalt not dull me with satiety.

FOURTH
Wound me not with cruel words.

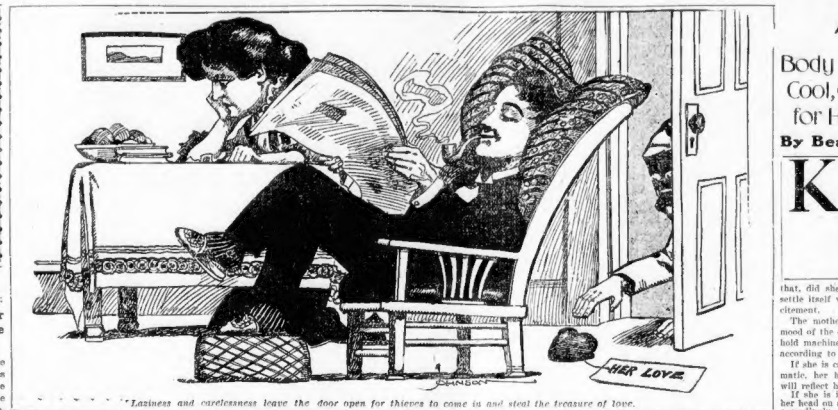
FIFTH
Thou shalt not bind me with fetters,

SIXTH
Guard me as the jewel of thy soul, for, once lost, I can never be regained.

By Dorothy Dix

The sixth commandment of love is this:

"Guard me as the jewel of your soul, for once lost I can never be regained."



"Laziness and carelessness leave the door open for thieves to come in and steal the treasure of love.

THE most inexplicable of all human vagaries is the fact that we take so little thought and precaution to safeguard love.

If a man had all his fortune in Government bonds, and should leave them lying carelessly about for any thieving hand to steal them, or should he so indifferent to their whereabouts that he lost them through his own carelessness; if a woman had a diamond tiara that she did not think enough of to even keep clean, and that she let get mutilated and disfigured; if we should see two people strive with might and main to gain some exquisite thing that should have made their house beautiful all their lives, and then should behold them, as soon as they got it, trample it into the mire, we should think them crazy, and their nearest of kin would petition the courts to lock them up in a safe place and take care of their property for them.

Yet what are gold and jewels and brica-brac compared to love?

In our hearts none of us mistake the value of things. We know that love is the greatest thing in the world, that it is the one priceless possession of our soul, that it is the thing that we crave above all other things on earth.

Yet we have this curious contradiction that the man who could not sleep at night unless he knew he had safely hidden his pocketbook with only $10 in it, so that burglars could not find it, and the woman who keeps her jewels locked up in a safety deposit box, lest she should lose them, are so careless of the love that has been intrusted to them that they let it be lost or stolen before they know it.

Careless of Love

IT is a very pathetic truth that if men and women would take only a tithe of the pains and trouble to protect their hearts that they do to protect their worldly goods and chattels there would be mighty few divorces and mighty few suits for alienation of the affections.

It is the custom to express sympathy with the jilted swain or maiden, or the cheated husband or wife. In reality, they are more to be blamed than pitied. Never to be loved is an undeserved misfortune, but to have been loved and to have lost love shows criminal carelessness and incompetency.

Before marriage, love is more or less of an Indian gift, that may be taken back if the donor exchanges his or her mind, without any reflections on the other party.

It is tentative, experimental—a loan rather than a present intended for keeps, but marriage means the free and full gift—a title deed with all that carries with it—of another's heart, and the shame is that any of us should show so little appreciation of such a gift as to lose it, or allow ourselves to be robbed of it.

Yet this accident happens so continually that it takes special courts and detectives to hunt down the freebooters of love and punish them for their depredations, and the air is full of the lamentation of husbands and wives who are beating upon their breasts and wailing out that somehow, somewhere, they have lost or mislaid the affection of their spouses.

Too Indifferent

HOW does it happen?

A man marries a woman who gives him her whole loving heart, her romantic girlish dreams, her tender, clinging, sensitive soul. It's a great gift—enough to make a man a billionaire of affection, and you would think that he would exhaust every device, every particle of ingenuity in keeping it safe. But he doesn't.

He is too busy to protect it, too careless to lock it up. He doesn't even take the trouble to look at it, now and then, to see that it is still there.

He is so interested in his business that he is away from home from early morn until dinner time, and then he is too tired and too absorbed in his affairs to bother about what his wife thinks, or wants, or desires.

Still less does he worry himself to find out whether he has still got her love, and then some day he wakes up to find out that she is just as indifferent to him as he is to her.

He has lost her love.

It may have wasted away, little by little, as gold dust sifts through a tiny hole in a miner's pocuch, or it may have been lost all in a lump when she realized that she had cast her pearls before swine, but it is gone—hopelessly and irretrievably lost.

Or, his own may have been the hand that set the door of his wife's heart wide open for thieves to come in and steal treasure.

She craved sympathy, he gave her none. She loved amusement, he was too busy to accompany her even to the theatre, or too stingy to give her as much as a treat of a restaurant supper.

She had enthusiasm for art and literature, he mocked at them.

She loved society, he let her go into it alone and unguarded.

Be sure that no man ever alienates the affection of another man's wife unless the husband is too indifferent to keep what he has won.

And Women, Too

HOW does a woman lose her husband's affection?

By the same road. By laziness, by weakness, by incompetency, by trifling ness, by carelessness.

She first charmed him by her prettiness and gentleness. She lets herself grow slouchy and unattractive.

He fell in love with her because she was amiable and sweet. She grows querulous and complaining and fretting.

He dreamed of a home that would be full of comfort and peace. She makes one where all the demons of discomfort and dirt and discontent have their abode.

She complains that other women have stolen her husband's heart away from her, but they could not have stolen it if she had not given them the opportunity.

The coquettes of the world are merely snaky thieves that pilfer the things that are lying around loose and on which they can put their hands easily. They cannot break through the impregnable wall or understanding, and sympathy, and devotion that a wife can build about her husband's heart if she will.

We spend our lives devising ways to keep our cash and our gewgaws safe, but we do nothing to protect our love, and keep it from getting lost or stolen. Yet if we lose our money, we can make more; if our jewels are stolen we may possibly recover them, but if we once lose love, it is gone forever—nothing can ever restore it to us again.

Oh, the pity of it!

Keep Your Temper; It Is the Easiest Way to Keep Cool

Body Cool, Mind Cool, Good Advice for Hot Weather

By Beatrice Fairfax

KEEP your temper and don't fly into a rage over every little irritation that comes your way.

The warm weather is hard on every one, and the first aid to keeping your body cool is to keep your mind cool.

A woman can work herself into a perfect fever over some trifle that, did she but take it calmly, would settle itself with comparatively little excitement.

The mother is the pacemaker for the mood of the entire family, and the household machinery runs evenly or unevenly according to her handling of it.

If she is calm, good natured and systematic, her husband, children and house will reflect her qualities.

If she is irritable, impatient and loses her head on all occasions, they will suffer accordingly.

I do not for a moment mean to insinuate that it is easy for the mother to bear all this responsibility or to live up to it.

On the contrary, it is exceedingly hard and requires all the patience and forbearance of mother love to make it possible.

But the mother is the most important member of the household, and on her falls the great responsibility of making the family life smooth and peaceful.

If she can only school herself to take things quietly, it will help matters wonderfully.

I know one mother, who, during the hot days, gathers her brood of little ones into the house for an hour or so in the middle of the day.

She sponges off their faces and heads, takes off most of their clothing and gives them a few toys or books to play with.

She does her own work, and it is very hard woman, but she says the time spent in doing this for the children is well spent. It cools them off and rests them wonderfully.

Both her temper and theirs are better for the quiet.

If there are any grown daughters or even any growing daughters in the family, they can, of course, be of inestimable assistance to the mother.

They can take the children off her hands for an hour or so and let her rest or go for a little pleasure jaunt.

Mothers appreciate little attentions of this kind, and, alas! they rarely get them.

So if any big daughters read this I hope they will put it in practice.

As for the mother, she will find that the example set by her will be faithfully copied by the children.

If she loses her temper over every trifle and snaps at the children for every small misdemeanor, they will do the same with one another.

The Summer weather is hard on children. They feel the heat and are cross and cranky without knowing why.

The elder people are cross also, and the poor wee tots reap the benefit of their elders' discomforts.

Let some of the small offences go unnoticed during the hot days, and be patient with attending to the more important ones.

Take life easily for a while and you will find that both yourself and all those connected with you will be much more happy and comfortable.

WHAT would she do? He was afraid to think. Could he brazen it out? No; that was out of the question. There was nothing for it but instant flight. And yet he did not want to leave now—not, at any rate, until he had seen or ascertained how this was going to affect him.

Question after question hammered in maddening succession on his brain. What was that loathsome blackmailer doing on board the Senfona? That in itself was sufficiently inopportune to seriously disturb his already disturbed peace of mind. But, principally, what was Judith going to do? That question was answered unexpectedly, and rather to his satisfaction.

He had decided to make a hurried departure, and was making his way toward Mrs. Armstrong to make his adieux when he heard Mrs. Lorne talking to her companion, young Neil.

"Most extraordinary thing!" she said. "Poor Miss Mort has been fearfully upset. Did you hear that scream just now?"

"Rather!" said Neil. "Everyone did. We thought it was a man overboard."

"Well, it was Judith. She was talking to a man on deck when she suddenly went into hysterics and tore down to her cabin. She's there now."

"Better?"

"Who Was the Man?"

"I don't know."

"Hard lines on him, anyhow," said Neil ironically. "Shall we dance this?"

"No; I think, if you don't mind, we'll go up and get a breath of air. I have a suspicion of a headache, and I don't want it to develop beyond a suspicion. The night is still young."

"Anyhow, you must promise me you won't go into hysterics."

"Not I," laughed Mrs. Kirke, "though your Napoleonic figure is enough to make me."

"Pity so many people know each other, despite their disguises, and mask and domino, isn't it?" said Neil. "It would be so much more funny if we were really incognito. There are, as a matter of fact, a good many here whom I don't know and can't for the life of me make out. That's where the fun comes in. Now look at that monk——"

Stephen waited to hear no more. He passed on, and merged in the crowd.

So far, at any rate, his identity was unknown; and it was an enormous weight off his mind to hear, even indirectly, that Judith Mort was not going about proclaiming it to the world.

After all, even if she had recognized a likeness to the man she believed to be dead, both in his voice and in his face, it was not for a moment to be considered that she would believe it to be anything else, because it would never occur to her for a moment to think of the possibility of his not being dead. Let her think she had seen a ghost, by all means. Let her imagine it to be a hallucination.

He thought for a moment of seeking her out again, and endeavoring to dispel the illusion; but he feared to run the risk.

So Great a Risk.

No; there was nothing for it but for him to get away as soon as possible and in a manner that excited no comment.

To find out the reason of Fergus Brahne's presence on the yacht was out of the question, much as he wanted, and would have risked, to know.

And as much out of the question was it for the thing that he wanted to do—to see Mary Armstrong again, to speak to her, to hear her dear voice.

No; he must sacrifice everything now to expediency and to flight.

He caught a momentary glimpse of her in the gay crowd. She was dancing with a tall man in the uniform of the old Navy of France of the time of Waterloo.

She was afraid to wait, lest he should be tempted beyond his strength. Yet he knew that he was going away forever, that in all human probability he would never see her again.

"Good-by, my life and my love!" he breathed. "Oh, God, watch over her and keep her safe. Good-by!"

Then he turned his face resolutely away and strode on. He had left the sunshine behind, and had already stepped into the tomb.

He remembered very little afterward of what happened, or how he left the yacht, and ultimately found himself in Marseilles driving in an open cab to his hotel.

CHAPTER CXXXI.

The Way of Fergus Brahne.

MR. FERGUS BRAINE had said to his client, Morley Darch: "I have misconceived your motives all along. That is all. I imagined that you wanted to marry Miss Mary Armstrong for the greatest love on earth. I was mistaken. I now see that everything is subservient to your desire to rob and disgrace her father." And Darch had answered, with grim intensity: "In other words, I have a thirst for revenge."

The conclusion somewhat upset Mr. Fergus Brahne's previous plans and hypothetical calculations. To run with the hare and hunt with the hounds is always a difficult, if not impossible, accomplishment; but it might very well have stood as the motto of Fergus Brahne.

Darch, the millionaire financier, was worth a great deal to the wily Brahne; and so on the other hand, was the rich and powerful Armstrong, the Soap King. So far he had admirably succeeded in keeping the balances equal, and in lining his pockets in the meantime from the coffers of each of the giants of wealth and commerce; but, if the whole matter was to be brought to a conclusion and a definite crisis, the position became more difficult and complicated.

In the first place, Brahne had no particular desire to aid the Gunter-Armstrong side to victory. It would without doubt redound to his discredit, and that, after all, was one of the most important points. Then, again, he had, strange though it may seem in a man so utterly devoid of all idea of truth or honor a very deeply ingrained dislike of Morley Darch, and an unconquerable admiration for the beautiful Mary Armstrong—not that he was ever likely to allow personal likes or dislikes to interfere with his decision and actions.

Or Decent Feeling,

While it was merely a question of preventing Mary Armstrong from marrying, and so keeping the diamond hope in Darch's breast, he felt confident of success. Darch, on the other side, he gained credit and much money from Armstrong for preventing Darch from putting his threats into execution.

But the present position puzzled him. He had never taken it into account in his reckonings.

For a day he thought the matter over in all its bearings, and came to the conclusion that, at all costs, Darch must be prevented from taking the decisive step. Brahne lived and thrived on threats, not on definite actions. The thing was not good enough, he probably told himself, and although he always meant one day to make a great deal more, this was not the big enough. True, he was exceeding rich, and if Brahne's Private Inquiry Agency never did another stroke of business he would be quite justified in saying that, he had too many plans uncompleted, too many undeveloped ideas, and too many chances of materially adding to his hoard of ill-gotten gold to want to risk it all on what he would be able to make out of Morley Darch.

He determined, therefore, to make a stand, but was surprised shortly afterwards to get a call from Darch himself.

"Brahne," he said, "I've been thinking over our recent conversation. I was excited, and spoke rather wildly and all that sort of thing."

About Revenge

Brahne held his peace and listened attentively.

"Revenge, after all," Darch continued, "is a confession of weakness. I have changed my feelings in my life yet that I have not managed somehow, or perhaps by fair means or foul, to get. I want Mary Armstrong. You understand? And I mean to have her. Do you understand that?"

"As a matter of fact," said Brahne, with a sigh of profound relief, "I have understood everything since; and part of my recent decision to abandon all thought of the matter in order merely for the purpose of venting your anger, and, if I may say so, spite upon the girl's father, who, after all, has never, to my knowledge, done you any harm, is one that I make quite at variance with my idea of your interests."

"Oh, shut up!" impatiently ejaculated Darch. "I never came across such a mass as you are for rambling along in meaningless platitudes. Still, I've no doubt probably well paid for it. I see, at any rate, that you have a great mistake in thinking all men are fools. You are very clever, no doubt; but it does not necessarily follow that Morley Darch is a fool."

Fergus Brahne bowed apologetically.

"What, then, do you wish to do?"

"Monkton is in New York," said Darch. "I want him back in London."

"Ah! So he has arrived!"

"Yes; and I want you to use every means to show me that he does not desire to continue our acquaintance. I want him back. I don't care how—probably quite a lot. You can never trust women."

"I'd trust Miss Armstrong," said Brahne.

"Oh, I know you'd trust any of the Armstrongs," sneered Darch. "You make me sick sometimes. But I don't necessarily agree with you. We must tackle Monkton."

Brahne's eyes lighted up.

"That's something to the point," he exclaimed.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl and keeping company with a young man and I will soon be engaged. There is one thing I want to ask you is this: My young man comes around almost every evening. He works hard all day and at night it seems he cannot rest, he falls right to sleep when he calls on me. So please tell me whether it is gentlemanlike or not.

WORRIED.

DO not be too hard on him. He is probably worn out after his day's work. Of course it is not very polite to go to sleep while making a call, but you must make allowances for him. Perhaps if he did not call every day he would find it easier to keep awake. Try and make yourself so entertaining that he won't be able to sleep.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I write to ask you what you think of a girl of twenty-one answering her mother back. Ever since she was a little girl she has told her mother to shut up and mind her own business, and the older she gets the worse she is. She has younger sisters and they are just the same. Of course the older one sets the example. When I call on her I feel just furious because she is far worse to her mother when she has company. I really feel ashamed at her. Will you please tell me what you think of a girl who is so rude to her mother. When I tell people about her they say it is the fault of her mother, for she is bringing her children up that way, and I think it is true. Nothing so disgusts people as to see a child disrespectful to its parents. Have you no influence with this girl. Can't you make her see what other people think of her? Putting everything else aside, it is too bad she should so stand in her own light.

OPINION.

I HAVE not space enough to tell you my opinion of a girl of this kind. Of course to a certain extent the fault does lie with the mother. She should have stopped it in its infancy. I should think the girl would have no friends, and that any man who was inclined to pay her attention would stop as soon as he saw her treatment of her mother. She will never make a good wife and mother. Nothing so disgusts people as to see a child disrespectful to its parents. Have you no influence with this girl. Can't you make her see what other people think of her? Putting everything else aside, it is too bad she should so stand in her own light.

TO IMPROVE THE VOICE

EVERY woman may have a beautiful voice, and what a charm it is to possess.

The strident nasal tones of the majority of women of to-day are harsh and unnatural. It is simply through carelessness and perhaps a desire to make themselves heard above the noise that women allow their voices to become loud and unpleasant.

Train your ear to notice a pleasant voice and listen to your own critically.

If it has lost the gentle sweetness that every woman's voice should possess, find out what is the matter and try to change it.

In the seclusion of your own room try the pitch of your voice until you discover its most melodious tone. Cultivate this. It will require painstaking efforts to overcome bad habits, the tones and ear train it to musical utterance, but the reward will be well worth the labor.

Instead of shouting with all the strength of your lungs, control your voice. Do not raise it to a loud pitch and talk as if everyone was deaf.

Half the secret in making your voice agreeable to listen to is the degree of modulation you acquire.

It is as much an art to suit your voice to the occasion as your hat, and you may be very sure that a woman whose voice lacks something in its tone or expression lacks just that same thing in nature.

A mind that is beautiful finds true expression in a voice that is beautiful.

Women you will be judged more critically in all the world over for your voices than for anything else, so take as much thought and trouble for them as you do for gowns, and your hats, or bobbies, and you will soon find you have added a potent charm to your womanly attractions.

TWO OPEN LETTERS

IMPORTANT TO MARRIED WOMEN

Mrs. Mary Dimmick of Washington tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well.

It is with great pleasure we publish the following letters, as they convincingly prove the claim we have so many times made in our columns that Mrs.

Mrs. Mary Dimmick

Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., is fully qualified to give helpful advice to sick women. Read Mrs. Dimmick's letters.

Her first letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a sufferer for the past eight years with a trouble which first originated from painful menstruation—the pains were excruciating, with inflammation and ulceration of the womb. The doctor says I must have an operation or I cannot live. I do not want to submit to an operation if I can possibly avoid it. Please help me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, Washington, D. C.

Her second letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"You will remember my condition when I last wrote you, and that the doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I received your kind letter and followed your advice very carefully and am now entirely well. As my case was so serious it seems a miracle that I am cured. I know that I owes not only my health but my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to your advice. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I wish every suffering woman would read this letter and realize what you can do for them."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 501 East Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

How easy it was for Mrs. Dimmick to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and how little it cost her—a two-cent stamp. Yet how valuable was the reply! As Mrs. Dimmick says—it saved her life.

Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of just such letters as the above, and offers ailing women helpful advice.

QUOIT STRIKES POWDER BOTTLE

PHILADELPHIA, July 21—Thirteen-year old George Engle, of Seventh street and Fisher's lane, Germantown, was seriously injured by the explosion of a bottle filled with gunpowder. With a number of companions he was playing quoits at Tenth street and Fisher's lane. He saw the bottle lying nearby and quickly substituted it as a stake.

The boys used horseshoes as quoits and Engle pitched one toward the bottle. Immediately there was a terrific explosion, and the heavy end of the bottle struck Engle at the base of the skull. He was hurried to the Jewish Hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a fractured skull. Little hope is entertained of his recovery. Engle's companions were cut about the face and body by the flying glass, but not seriously injured.

TWO BLUES FOR JORDAN HORSES

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 21.—The entries of Eben D. Jordan of Boston and Mrs. Grosvenor of the Hoosatonic farms again upheld the prestige of New England at the third day of the horse show here.

Mr. Jordan's Lord Bolfast and Lord Burleigh won the blue in the event for eleven hands horses, and his Baron took first honors in the judging of five harness horses. In the four-in-hand class, he got second with Baron, President, Hildreth and Plymouth Champion, while his Dominee was placed second in the event for ponies.

Mrs. Grosvenor's Honest John was given the bliss for ponies and her Nixon the blue in the combination harness and saddle horse events, while her entries won a number of lesser prizes.

DIVIDENDS ON COPPER.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The directors of the Amalgamated Copper declared a quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent., an increase of ¼ per cent. This places the stock again on a 5 per cent. basis, where it was a few years ago before the crash that sent it from around 130 to nearly 55.

'HEAVEN' AND 'HELL' ON BOARD

NEW YORK, July 21.—The cabin list of the North German Lloyd steamship Koenig Albert, which arrived here on Wednesday night, reveals a striking contrast in the names of two passengers.

TEAMSTERS END STRIKE

CHICAGO, July 21.—The teamsters' strike has been unofficially declared off by the members of the Teamsters' Joint Council.

The men have been ordered to seek their old positions and it is estimated that less than one-half of them will be re-employed. The strikers will apply for work as individuals and without an agreement of any kind with their employers.

The action of the Teamsters' Joint Council was taken at the end of the day whose events clearly foreshadowed the collapse of the strike.

Three of the unions had already voted to return to work if possible, and it was regarded as certain that the unions which had not yet voted on the question of ending the strike would take similar action.

The council, believing further effort was useless, decided to call off the strike at once.

BALFOUR WAS DEFEATED BY MAJORITY OF 4

Resignation of British Cabinet May Follow Meeting Which Is Called To-day.

LONDON, July 21.—The record of the vote on the motion to reduce the membership of the Irish Land Commission, on which the government was defeated in the House of Commons, shows that the majority of the opposition was four instead of three votes, as at first announced.

Premier Balfour will summon the Cabinet for a meeting at which it is to be decided whether the ministry must resign or demand a new vote on the question. If a second vote is taken it would almost certainly result in a government majority.

The Conservative newspapers advise the government to continue in office, while the Liberal papers declare that Mr. Balfour will endanger the British constitution if he fails to resign.

The Echo says: "Constitutionally, we fail to see how Premier Balfour can write qfe out of the situation with any show of decency."

The Star's comment is: "The continued existence of this ineffable, unspeakable government is an outrage on the constitution and a peril to the empire."

There is no doubt that Englishmen generally would welcome the retirement of the Cabinet, but Mr. Balfour realizes that if he should resign at this time the Liberals would surely be returned to power by a tremendous majority.

The general belief is that Mr. Balfour intends to hang on to his office in the hope that the antagonism which is felt for him throughout the country at present will die out, and that the Conservative party will be able to win in a general election next year.

CONVICT CAPTURED AFTER 12 YEARS

CHINA DEMANDS RESTORATION OF MANCHURIA

Tells Russia, Japan and America She Expects It to Be Returned to Her.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—China's official notification to the powers that she will not recognize any arrangement regarding Manchuria, concerning which she has not been consulted beforehand, has been received here and will be forwarded to the President. An identical note has been sent to St. Petersburg and Tokio.

China does not, as yet, intend to participate in the peace conference. In fact, she does not want to be forced into the negotiations, but she is desirous of reminding the powers that she never acquiesced in the alienation of the province of Manchuria from her sovereignty and that she expects, as the first result of the war, the full restoration of that province to her control.

If this result is not provided for China may appeal to the United States to uphold the Hay doctrine of "the preservation of the territorial and administrative entity of China."

It is understood that China has the entire sympathy of the Washington Government in her action and desires.

BARON J. KOMURA, JAPANESE ENVOY, BEGINS HIS DUTIES

SEATTLE, Wash., July 21.—Baron J. Komura, foreign minister of Japan, and one of the two Japanese Peace Commissioners, has begun his duties here in attending to the mass of diplomatic correspondence which awaited him. Much of this will be taken up on the train for the East. The private car of J. J. Hill will be used by the Ambassador.

Baron Komura has determined not to give out any interviews while in America relative to peace negotiations or the war conditions. It is said an unattached member of the foreign service will be the spokesman of the party.

BIG GUN DRILL FOR GOVERNOR BY HEAVIES

Elaborate Plans for Entertainment of Commander-in-Chief at Fort Rodman.

NEW BEDFORD, July 21.—Target practice with the rapid fire and fifteen-pounder guns formed the feature of the work put in by the Second Battalion of the First Heavies at Fort Rodman yesterday.

The floating target was placed at 2,500 yards' range, and at noon, commencing with Battery E of Fall River, followed by Batteries H of New Bedford, M of Taunton and I of Dighton, in the order named, the firing began. The first shot aimed by the Fall River gunners was a bullseye, and it proved to be the forerunner of many such.

This is Governor's Day. Elaborate preparations have been made for the reception of Governor Douglas and his suite. The converted yacht Isca conveys the Governor's party from Monument Beach to the camp.

Governor Douglas reviews both the regular and State troops and it is hoped will stay to witness the evening parade.

Practice with the heavy guns is also scheduled for to-day, so that another gun shooting Governor Douglas should see something energetic in their routine work and their efficiency and smartness has been the subject of much comment.

Teams from Batteries E and M engaged in a ball game yesterday on the parade ground, which resulted in a victory for Fall River by 8 to 5.

LINEMAN KILLED BY ELECTRICITY

Fraser was on a pole, and one of the wires he was attaching fell over a wire supporting the street railway trolley feeder. Electricity was communicated through the support wire and Fraser fell among a mass of wires and died within a few minutes.

"VACATION" OF GIRL WORRIES HER FATHER

Fifteen - Year - Old Daughter Drops a Line to Parent and Then Disappears.

Search is being made in Lawrence for fifteen-year-old Margaret Fitzgerald of No. 48 North street, Newton, whose sudden departure from home has greatly worried her parents.

She works in the Saxony mills, Nonantum. She left her work in the afternoon, went home, packed up her best clothes and left the house. She wrote a brief note to her father saying that she had gone on a vacation. Her father found this note when he came home from work.

Mr. Fitzgerald thinks Margaret is in Lawrence because she has friends there and had talked much of intending to visit them. He does not think that she intends to leave home permanently, only he would like to know where she is passing the "vacation" that she wrote she was about to take.

Don't Scowl This Hot Weather

You and Everybody Else Will Feel Better if You Are Polite

Boston has the national reputation of being the centre of culture—and frigid formality. Unfortunately for the comfort of strangers within the gates the latter is too often true.

The writer happened to be in New York during the hot days of the first of this week. The city's population was rushing by the hundred thousands to the beaches, to get away from the death-dealing heat. Train after train left the New York end of the bridge for Coney Island, with every seat taken.

At Atlantic avenue, in Brooklyn, two women entered the elevated car. One was young and rather pretty. The other was beyond middle age, and had gray hair. They stood swaying in the aisle, with many others.

A young man gave his seat to the elder woman. She smiled upon him pleasantly and said, "Thank you," as she took the seat. Then, as she settled herself, she said to him, "It seems a shame for me to take your place. You probably had to fight for it in the bridge. It just seems as if I ought to stand."

The young man bowed and made no reply, and half the car looked curiously at the woman who, in these modern days, seemed thankful for a seat. Another young man, catching the spirit, arose and gave his seat to the younger, prettier woman. She took it, but for any sign she gave she did not even see the man who had condemned himself to stand in a swaying elevated car for a half hour that she might be more comfortable.

The remainder of the men in the car returned to their newspapers.

In Boston, even more than in New York, it is unfortunately a common thing to see women, upon receiving seats, take them as the young and pretty girl did. It is very uncommon to hear any woman express her thanks for the courtesy that is done her.

Now it isn't necessary to be effusively grateful. The man doesn't expect it, and of course it wouldn't be advisable for a woman to have much to say about it, unless, as in the Brooklyn incident, she had age and gray hair. To indiscriminately talk to a stranger because he was polite might be worse than not noticing him at all.

But politeness is not effusiveness. And politeness is always worth while. If more women practiced it, more women would be given seats in street cars. Any man will tell you that.

By the way, did you ever try apologizing to the man who suddenly runs into you at a crowded street corner? Try it some day, in place of scowling at him. You will be surprised to observe that he will almost invariably stop to claim all the responsibility and say he is sorry. Then he feels better, and you feel better, and both of you go on your way at greater peace with the world—which is a very healthful attitude to take on a very hot day.

A Service Rendered to the Public by a New York Firm

It Is Well to Prove That the Makers of Books Cannot Successfully Engineer a Monopoly of Knowledge

The firm of R. H. Macy & Co., of New York, rendered a really great service to the public at large, and to the business interests of the community, in their fight against the Book Trust.

The Book Trust alleged its right TO FORBID RETAILERS TO SELL BOOKS BELOW A CERTAIN PRICE FIXED BY THE TRUST.

Macy & Co., acting in behalf of the purchasing public, maintained in the courts, at considerable expense, THEIR RIGHT TO SELL MERCHANDISE BOUGHT BY THEM FOR WHATEVER PRICE THEY PLEASED.

The case was heard before Judge Ray in the United States Circuit Court, Isidor Straus and Nathan Straus, partners, appearing under the firm name of R. H. Macy & Co., in behalf of the public and the rights of the individual business man.

We have before us the opinion of George W. Ray, the United States Judge, sustaining absolutely, in a detailed and learned exposition of the law, the attitude of Messrs. Straus on their right to act as business men free from coercion by the Book Trust, or any other trust.

Judge Ray points out with admirable clearness that the attempt of the Book Trust to coerce the retail dealer is not only a wilful abridgment of the right of the individual, but a "combination to keep up the price of books and TO LIMIT AND RESTRAIN INTERSTATE COMMERCE."

Judge Ray states further in his valuable opinion that the Book Trust proposed

> To compel all publishers of and dealers in copyrighted books to come into the combination, submit to and be controlled by it and sells books at prices fixed by it, regardless of the value of the books, etc., or of the exigencies of the trade and situation of the seller, or be deprived of the privilege of purchasing, owning and selling such books. In short, such as refuse to come in are to be crippled or, perhaps, ruined in their business. As the combination extends throughout the United States, by the very terms of the agreement interstate commerce is necessarily restrained. A judgment for the complainants in this action will restrain interstate commerce.

Judge Ray further says:

> When all publishers of and dealers in copyrighted books—and nearly all new books are now copyrighted—combine to exact a fixed arbitrary price, etc., the readers of books become powerless, if they would read at all, not because of the monopoly granted or sanctioned by the government in granting the copyright, but because of the new monopoly (the conspiracy of monopolists), created by the agreement and combination of these monopolists, one that is forbidden and denounced by the act of July 2, 1890 (26 St. L. 209), entitled, "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

The opinion, which is invaluable as a protection to the individual business man, and more especially to the reading public, concludes as follows:

> The defendants have not infringed and are not threatening to infringe complainants' copyright, nor have they violated any contract. The complainant is seeking to enforce against defendants an unlawful combination agreement to which such defendants are not parties, and by which they have not consented to be bound in selling books of which they are the absolute owners. The same result on a similar state of facts as to the effect of such notice was reached by the court in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Snellenburg, 131 Fed. Rep. 530.
> The defendants are entitled to a decree dismissing the complaint with costs.

The thanks of the public are due to R. H. Macy & Co. for the fight that they made against this particular form of trust oppression. And still greater thanks are due to Judge Ray for this excellent opinion, in which he sustains the action of the Messrs. Straus, appearing in behalf of the public interests.

It is to be hoped that the get-rich-quick gentlemen who propose to get such money from the public by making themselves lords and masters of purchaser, retailer and all others, will take to heart the lesson that is taught them in the opinion quoted abo—

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Warns the Man Who Finds Amusement in Vicious Resorts That He Is on the Down Grade

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

A LITTLE story comes to the ears of a daughter and wife that the father and the husband she has loved and respected is known to frequent resorts of questionable repute.

When spoken to on the subject the man, although somewhat abashed, confessed the fact, but declared it is necessary "as a matter of business."

The man is neither a policeman, a detective, a doctor or a lawyer, and the woman is puzzled to understand how such associations can be involved in the career of an ordinary business man.

This is one of the situations impossible for an outsider to analyze. It would have been wise, as well as considerate, had the father and husband explained the "business necessity" more fully to the inquiring woman.

If a reasonable and probable explanation exists, why not give it? Were the situations reversed, and had the daughter and wife been known to frequent or even once to appear in any doubtful place, the father and husband would demand the fullest explanation.

And even though she might be a business woman, the reply of vague business reasons would never satisfy the masculine curiosity.

We cannot, of course, expect the same absolute circumspection from men that we expect of women.

Men and Women

MAN is a coarser animal, and by nature and custom a freer one.

A mannish man is one degree worse than a mannish woman, and both are monstrosities, to be shunned by angels and mortals. A touch of boldness in a man is attractive; in a woman it is shocking. A coarse act or expression may be forgiven a man—never a woman.

A moral and self-respecting man may walk down the street with a rose and not endanger his reputation, but a good woman cannot promenade with a bad one and be sure of her own unsullied name afterward.

Just so a man may go on business matters to places where wickedness keeps its watches and may linger to study human nature and come away with only a greater respect for goodness and morality, while even a few moments in such an atmosphere would drag a woman's mind down from the heights and leave an intangible shadow upon her life.

But when such find their recreation in such resorts, then indeed may wives and daughters question and grow sad and ponder over the inability of the husband and father to explain.

It is possible to understand the curiosity of the country-born and bred man who goes "to town" and thirsts for the sights of which he has so often heard. He wants to see the dark side of the city, the "Tenderloin," "the Bowery," the "dives."

And he feels exhilarating thrills of fear as he thinks what the folks in his church would say if they knew what he was seeing.

This type of man, I say, is not difficult to understand. It is simply the curiosity of ignorance seeking a wider experience.

Down Grade

BUT it is difficult to understand the city man, who deliberately leaves the wholesome and interesting excitements which every town gives its citizens for recreation of the mind, and frequents vicious resorts and depraved associates for amusement: who does this, not once or twice, but over and over again, until he is a well-known observer, if not participant, of the orgies of Satan.

Yet such men exist and remain honored members of society and generous subscribers to churches and charities; and they believe they are only enjoying masculine privileges and studying life from a man's standpoint.

They do not realize that they are destroying their own wholesome minds by slow, insidious poison, and bringing about themselves influences of evil, both from the visible and invisible realms.

In the words of the wisdom religion they are making "bad karma."

No man has any more moral right to do these things than has his wife or daughter or sister.

He is not a respectable man when he can find his recreation in such resorts. He is on the down grade, and it is only a matter of time when he reaches a lower level, where his only associates will be those of the under world.

We are building our hells and our heavens day by day.

And just as we build, so must we occupy.

> When, musing on companions gone,
> We doubly feel ourselves alone.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Platt and Life

Thomas C. Platt says, "Life isn't much after all."—News Item.

By James J. Montague

FAREWELL, dull existence; ah! farewell forever;
Just hand me a jug that contains chloroform,
And a pistol and dagger, and promptly I'll sever
My bonds with this planet of stress and of storm.
I once thought that life was perhaps worth the living;
My joys were not great, but they pleased me at that;
But now I am stricken with doubt and misgiving,
For I find that the earth doesn't suit old Tom Platt.

Come, hand me my pistol, and mind it is loaded.
And I soon will be quit of my worries and strife,
For Tom Platt's decision my spirit has goaded
To send myself out of this troublesome life.
I own I was fond of its phantom-like pleasures,
I liked a cigar, and a friend, and a chat,
But baubles, of course, are its riches and treasures,
Since they never have suited old Thomas C. Platt.

Ah! Pity of pities, to think the Creator,
When He breathed pulsing life on this planet of ours,
Could never imagine that sooner or later
His seas, and His skies, and His birds and His flowers
Would pall on the people He meant to enjoy them.
His gifts be rejected, His blessings fall flat;
That His rain would offend them, His sunshine would cloy them,
Because they weren't made to suit Thomas C. Platt.

Come, give us an arsenal, let us together
Form a suicide club, and upon the same day
Cast off with one bang the unbearable tether
That binds us to life when we'd fain soar away!
And on Venus or Saturn our little lives pattern
On some perfect model of happiness that
An older Creator, His wisdom grown greater,
Had fashioned expressly for Thomas C. Platt.

> Children learn to creep ere they can learn to go.
